Through our life
many different windows are set before us.
Windows with subtle colors to give the world a beautiful but false hue.
Smoked to take away the glare of the world.
Concave or convex to distort that which is seen.
And clear but imperfect windows which present the world as it is.

Quigg

Adams

For some, these windows may be a diversion from the world,
— a way to escape and cope with life.
But, the windows, which hold our dreams and bring each of us here to the University, as students, are far from a diversion.
They are seen through the clear but imperfect windows.
We realize that by seizing
the many opportunities seen through the windows, we can turn dreams into reality.

As children, our parents carefully chose the windows in which we viewed the world.
Distortion of the true world was the least of our cares.
As we grew we gained knowledge of the world.
Our parents were no longer present to protect us.
The time came when we were forced to make our own decisions.
We understood that to attain our foreseen dreams we were challenged to perceive the world through our own windows.

Vast windows full of possibilities lay before us, but each of us elect to further cultivate our minds.
Whether captured by its beauty,
scholarship programs, or convenience,
the University enables us to fulfill our dreams.
As we imagine our world through the countless windows, we perceive the endless opportunities which awaits us.

Along the way we came to those windows that are clear but imperfect.
We dwelled on the imperfections which resulted in frustrations.
These frustrations became walls in our minds.
For some, it provoked them to look at themselves and analyze their vision.
Others observed the setback as a challenge that compelled them to exert a greater effort.
Time was devoted, minds were developed, knowledge was gained, resulting in a worthwhile accomplishment
when the walls were torn down.

The experiences and people encountered at the University became very important to us. The memories created with these friends enhance the time spent at the University. The struggles whether positive or negative assisted in strengthening and developing oneself. The dreams now within range appeared unimaginable — but not undeserving. When examining the varied windows we have uncovered and the ones we have selected along the way, we realize our dreams are turning into reality.

Kentucky True Colors of the Bluegrass

The morning sun warms the green pastures as the thoroughbred stands alone with her young. The foals romp about testing their new limbs, as stallions and broodmares graze meadows of green. The land is quilted with black and white fences and green pastures of thoroughbred farms. What an incredible sight to hold; a scene of grace and richness that makes the Bluegrass the land of the horse.

An intriguing dimension of the horse industry takes place at the auction block. The year round sales of the thoroughbred are auctions of high stakes, high drama, and the high dollar. Whether it be the sales at Keeneland in the spring, or those at Fasig-Tipton in the fall, the excitement, hype, and celebration is abound in the sales arena.

At the track a unique rhythm penetrates the atmosphere. Jockeys parade their brilliantly colored silks, each with its unique design. There is a release of energy the moment the gate springs open and a surge of strength erupts as the cries of the jockey's are heard.

The breeding of these animals is an intricate and most important aspect of the horse industry. It is a highly expensive and chanceful art. Genetically unique, the thoroughbred has one of the oldest records of birth. No other records are as complete and accurate, from birth to bloodlines to achievements as those of the thoroughbred horse.

It's a world of its own, holding for each a spirit which only the Bluegrass can. The morn will again break across the lucious fields, where the champions of tomorrow will grow taller, faster, and stronger.

WDMC hits the air!

The expression "hands-on experience" once again took a concrete shape this year at the University with the construction of a campus student-run radio station, WDMC.

Entering the airwaves in August, 1984, WDMC provides laboratory experience to students and is offered by the Department of Mass Communications. Signals are transmitted by a carrier current system through the University's cables.

The station's signal, located at 57 on the AM dial, can be received by virtually all dormitories and academic buildings on campus.

WDMC disc jockeys entertain the campus community by providing the opportunity to listen to the format compiled of Top 40, album-oriented rock and urban contemporary music.

WDMC also gives students, primarily those majoring in mass communications, the opportunity to gain experience on the air, planning promotions for the station, musical air play and commercial production.

"We give practical experience to those who are interested in learning about the broadcast industry," said David Jones, a junior broadcasting major from London and WDMC station manager.

Eight management personnel compile the station's management staff and are advised by Donna Williams, broadcasting instructor. Also approximately 35 disc jockeys and students fill positions in sales of commercials and promotions.

WDMC staff members were greatly concerned with promoting the station to the community, according to promotional director, Stephanie Hapeman, a junior broadcasting major from Louisville. Promotional activities filled the year at the University for Hapeman.

As WDMC music director, Jeff Larsen, a junior broadcasting major from Grand Rapids, Michigan, has the duties of determining the music selection, building the music library and compiling the songs on the monthly hit list.

WDMC has proven to be a tool in the learning process and starting point for some future disc jockeys, station managers and sales personnel. Serving as a stepping stone for their future; on or off the air.

A Temptous Evening

The University's Gifford Theatre was the site for a magical event a cool October evening, one which the audience wouldn't soon forget. As Prospero cast his mystical spell over the theatre, the audience was thrown upon a stormy sea in the opening scene. This set the dramatic and magical theme for the theatre department's first production of the season, William Shakespeare's The Tempest, a show which received rave reviews.

The action takes place on an enchanted island where the Tempest, Prospero, exiled Duke of Milan, and his young daughter Miranda live. They were stranded here twelve years ago when Prospero was exiled. Ariel, a spirit, and Caliban, the slave, are servants to Prospero. Other characters sailing at sea include Alonso, the King of Naples, his brother,

Thompson

Sebastian and son Ferdinand. Also, Antonio, the usurping Duke of Milan, and Gonzalo an honest old council. Trinculo the jester and Stephano, a drunken butler add flavor to the crew.

Prospero finds his enemies aboard ship at sea, he then decides to revenge his enemies who exiled him years ago. He tosses them about by a temptous storm, which he controls, and purposely strands them on the island for his control. All the sailors are separated when they find themselves on the island. Ferdinand falls madly in love with Miranda and they are married at her father's wishes while the others fear he has drowned at sea. Prospero takes pity on his enemies and releases the royal party from his power to return home.

Superbly directed by Bill Logan, this production was a powerful example of the wide range of talent at the University. Keith Johnson designed the set and lighting. Johnson's talent produced a functional set of varying heights and levels, which allowed the play to flow effortlessly. The lighting was an excellently choreographed feature. Costume designer Janet Herrald, won approval with her impressive costuming. Homer Tracy's choreography gave the dance scenes style and life. Michael Webb's musical score was also a unique asset which must be commended.

The character's performances were believable and enjoyable. Rich Benson, as Prospero, showed great power on stage. Miranda, played by Christie Tate, was innocent and naive, yet refreshing. Todd Berling as Ferdinand, was a great source of energy on stage, giving his character great emotional feeling. Ariel, portrayed by Kari Coleman was a pleasure to watch as she mesmerized the island visitors. Pepper Stebbins played Caliban, the deformed slave, with much life. Stephano was expertly played by Wes Shofner. Nick DeSantis humorously portrayed Trinculo. Tom Highly as Antonio and Dwight Craft as Sebastian were energetic performers on stage. Alonso was played by Dr. Robert Burkhart, Chairman of the English Department. Also, Dr. Paul Winther, from the Department of Anthropology, performed as Gonzalo. The guest artists of the University mixed students with instructors for a more effective portrayal of the players.

The Tempest was an enjoyable show and it delighted patrons of all ages. It had been approximately 10 years since William Shakespeare had been to the University and he was welcomed with great applause.

Students See Their Fifth Year

An increasing number of students discover the necessity for extending their college careers from four to five years. Thus, the five-year student is created. Various reasons constitute this change for college students. One of the most common reasons is the delay in declaring a major, those who wait a year find themselves behind a year in their four-year programs.

One five-year student, Beth McCoun, a nursing major from Shelbyville, waited a year to declare her major because she was not sure about what she wanted to do. She explained, "It's hard for eighteen-year-olds to know what they want to do for the rest of their lives." After Beth worked in a hospital as a nurse's aide the summer after her freshman year, she returned to the University knowing she wanted to be a nurse. Beth said, "Waiting gave me time to mature and direct my goals in the areas I wanted."

Many students have to lengthen their time in college by necessity instead of by choice. A common problem is waiting to take a required class and finding it is a prerequisite to most of the other classes needed. Neil Thompson, an accounting major from Louisville, did not take a beginning major class and found later that he couldn't take other classes until he took the first one. Neil is a photographer for Public Information and the Milestone. Although he is getting more experience from his extended time in college, he does not plan on becoming a professional photographer.

Activities to be involved in at the University are many, and a lot of students participate in quite a few. Being involved has given Tim Coleman, a performing arts major from Shelbyville, more experience than he thought he would ever get at the University, but it has also been a reason for extending his college career. Tim is a member of Sigma Chi Fraternity, Show Choir, a Madrigal Singer, and works weekends in Nashville, Tennessee, on a production at Opryland. Tim stated, "Being so involved has slowed me down, there hasn't been enough time in my schedule for general education requirements because of ensemble hours I needed."

A common similarity found in five-year students is that they feel they are more ready for the "real world." Having possibly been in more extracurricular activities and held leadership positions because of their extra time in college, five-year students are more confident about their futures. Beth McCoun, who is Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority President and also a member of the Greek Honorary, Order of Omega, said, "Without this extra year, I know I wouldn't be holding the positions I am, being a five-year student definitely has its advantages."

Fall Fancies

As the weather turns cooler, students all over campus took time out from their studies to watch in wonder as the leaves took on beautiful splashes of red, orange, and gold; a final burst of color before the onset of winter.

The Theatrical Twilight Zone

With a key, you unlock the door to imagination, beyond it is another dimension — a dimension of sight, sound and mind. You're moving through a land on which shadows and substances of things and ideas. Guiding you through this wondrous journey is the hypnotic existence of the Theatrical Twilight Zone.

Submitted for your approval are four designers each with individual tasks before him. Each must create and design, sight, sound, action and movement. Accompanying each other on their journey, these four designers are about to take a trip into oddness and obsolescence, through a zone whose boundaries are that of imagination.

Example one, is that of a director, a director of action and sound. He works his actors to draw a picture of character portrayal.

Next, the choreographer enters the scene — a creator of movement, movement of feeling and style.

We now look at the designer of sight and spectacle, the set and lighting designer. His job being the creation of setting and lighting that sets your mood — the audience.

Examine now, the costume designer, also a creator of sight, period and feelings. Her goal is incorporating texture, color and style into a final product.

Finally, the most important factor in making the designer's work a reality is the student. One with a dedication and will to work and learn. With jobs as educators and designers they teach of that unknown theatrical zone. The student is being transported into another dimension of sight, sound, and mind, whether it be an actor, technician, or costumer.

All are invested in this zone under constant collaboration. Each designer with his goals in mind, working with one another. The sign post up ahead is calling for a unified product to be finally viewed by you, the audience of the Theatrical Twilight Zone!

Although the 1984 Presidential Election may not have been an unpredictable one, it was certainly one of the most memorable — not only for the nation as a whole but also for the Commonwealth of Kentucky.

The first debate between Mondale and Reagan was held at the Kentucky Center for the Arts in Louisville. Also, earlier in the race it seemed Kentucky's own governor might be selected as a running mate for Mondale. Although Martha Layne Collins was not chosen, another woman, Congresswoman, Geraldine Ferraro, was selected as Mondale's vice-presidential candidate. This event marked the first time a woman ever ran on the democratic ticket for the office of vice-president.

Another aspect that made this election year so memorable was Reagan's landslide victory. Reagan claimed 525 electoral votes to Mondale's 13 which, in modern times, was only surpassed by Franklin Roosevelt in 1936.

On this University's campus support and enthusiasm was shown for both parties. Bumperstickers were plastered on cars, signs were hung in dorm windows, and buttons were worn on jackets and backpacks. One sorority even made a banner encouraging students to just get out and vote. On campus, voting was held in Burnham Hall, for the convenience of the voting student.

What was Reagan's reaction to his victory and the prospect of four more years? "You ain't seen nothin' yet."

Agriculture A Learning Experience

The theme "we are family," describes the University's agricultural department. It is a small college with 240 students involved in agriculture, horticulture, and pre-veterinary medicine.

Not only does participating in class together allow the students and faculty to acquaint themselves with each other, but many of them work together to create a family atmosphere. John Mullins, a senior agricultural major said, "If you work with someone four or five hours a day, that's something you don't get in the classroom."

This family atmosphere is seen often in the department.

The students receive hands on training in their areas by working in the department's five greenhouses, on a dairy farm or in the orchards. They also receive experience on two farms used by the department. The Stateland Dairy is adjacent to campus, and Meadowbrook Farm is located about 10 miles east of Richmond.

Although the students work hard, they participate in various activities, such as cookouts, hayrides and parties sponsored by the departmental clubs.

The agricultural, soil conservation, horticultural/FTD, the pre-veterinarian clubs and Delta Tau Alpha, an agricultural honor society, cater to specialized areas of interest within the broad area of agriculture. Students may be active in a number of these organizations or all of them.

During the year the various organizations have cheese sales, sponsor lawn mower clinics, work for the prevention of soil erosion, sell flowers and make floral arrangements for various events.

At the end of the year, all the organizations unite for a combined departmental banquet, with the different organizations present scholarships, recognize outstanding students and announce new officers for the coming year.

Homecoming Queen

The tension mounted as the 15 candidates stood anxiously awaiting the final announcement. The voice boomed out over the intercom, "The 1984 Homecoming Queen is Jane Bowling Rees."

"I was shocked," said Rees. "I got this shaky feeling all over; I just couldn't believe they picked me."

Rees, escorted by her father, Gayle H. Rees, represented the Society for Advanced Management. She is involved in the University Show Choir and is a member of Chi Omega sorority.

The path to becoming a Homecoming Queen is a long one. A candidate is chosen to represent a campus group or organization. All nominated candidates are then subjected to a campus wide vote of which only 15 can become finalists.

The day before Homecoming the 15 finalists have lunch with the group of judges who are responsible for selecting the Homecoming Queen.

This luncheon is followed by an interviewing session process which gives the judges a more personal view of each candidate.

The procedure is a long but enjoyable one for each of the candidates, but only one can be chosen to represent Eastern Kentucky University as the Homecoming Queen.

The Sawyer Brown concert kicked off the Homecoming festivities on Thursday night. They performed in Brock Auditorium for the University and featured the introduction of the 15 Homecoming Queen finalists.

Homecoming 1984 dawned a cool, crisp autumn day. The festivities began the week of Homecoming when various clubs and organizations collaborated in an artistic effort to create floats for the traditional Homecoming parade held on the morning of October 13.

In keeping with the theme, "Cartoon Capers," Beta Theta Pi Fraternity and Alpha Delta Pi Sorority won the prize for the most original float with their version of "It's the Wizard of Kidd."

The festivities centered to the football stadium where Jane Bowling Rees, a senior from Lexington, was crowned 1984 Homecoming Queen by President J.C. Powell before a crowd of 18,100.

The Colonels ended a celebrated day as they defeated Central Florida 37-14.

Winter onderland

Winter made its presence known as snow enveloped many parts of Kentucky. This was a welcome sight for some students who enjoyed sleigh riding and snowball fights in the ravine. For other students, commuters in particular, winter meant facing the problems of getting stuck in the snow.

As the University is laced with snow, the candled windows of the Keen Johnson Building turn as a sure sign of the approaching holidays.

❖ CHRISTMAS ❖ A Mixture of Seasonal Feelings

Just as sleigh bells are heard in the distance heralding the approach of a horse-drawn sleigh, the shortened days of fall beckon the advance of yet another holiday season. Traditionally, one will imagine that of Currier and Ives snow-laced landscapes. The fresh touch of pine and eggnog mingle through the air, as meticulously wrapped packages are placed under the tree. The smell of cookies baking and turkey roasting in the oven, fills the house with a fragrant spice. Children await in breathless suspense for the arrival of Santa Claus, and family and friends gather together on frosty nights to sing carols of the season. These reflections are all traditional visions of Christmas delights that the season holds.

However, the holiday season at the University is an experience in itself, not to be equated with pictures of tradition. To many students, Christmas is something that is not actually felt in advance, but appears as an intangible goal, something to live for. Christmas means the end of finals week and more importantly, the conquest of yet another semester. The holiday brings no more pressure or due dates, yet three weeks of mindless bliss.

Because of the spirit and love which the holiday represents, Christmas traditions will always prevail at the University in some ways. Students decorate their dormitory windows with blinking multi-colored lights. The annual "Hanging of the Greens" in the Keen Johnson Building and the Madrigal Dinner Feast, both sponsored by various University organizations — all are traditional seasonal events at the University. The Greek community sponsors various events, such as an evening of caroling, dances, and benefit events, which aid the Richmond area during the holidays. All of these occasions bring the holiday spirit to a seemingly empty listless University.

Although small presents appear from anonymous Kris Kringles, Christmas cards fall into dormitory mailboxes, and WEKY plays an occasional Christmas carol, the spiritless University brings some traditions to life every year during the holidays. These are all little ways which students pass the holiday spirit to those sharing their same isolated niche. As dreaded and as fatally dreamed of as finals week may be and as spiritless as students may appear, void of the Christmas joy, there is always a small sign for hope. The glimmer of potential for students to express and come together and find that wonderful Christmas excitement among the mounds of textbooks and the piles of notes is present.

The University: Historically Unique

Known as the “Campus Beautiful,” the University has an unparalleled beauty and grace that is unique. A style and class which is reflected in the varied architecture of its buildings.

A portion of the University’s campus was placed on the National Register of Historic Places by the National Park Service during the years of 1973 through 1982. Presently, 13 different structures stand in the University’s Historic District, from Blanton House, to the Keen Johnson Building, to the Crabbe Library. All of these structures represent three separate and distinct styles of architecture.

The University Building is the oldest building at the University. It was constructed in 1874, at a cost of $30,000. The stones used in its construction were fired on the sight and were so heavy that mules had to be used to transport the stones up to the various floors for construction. However, one small problem did arise, once the building was complete, the mules, being on the top floor refused to go back down. The builders were forced to shoot the animals.

Another interesting fact about the University was that it was originally designed by the Olmstead Landscape Firm — the same firm which designed New York’s Central Park.

Beckham, McCreary and Miller Halls were constructed by the PWA as a men’s dormitory complex. It was named in honor of political leaders responsible for the establishment of the University enabling legislation.

The John Grant Crabbe Library was built in 1923 and named for the University’s second president. The original construction cost was $67,703, with a renovation price of over 2.5 million in 1965.

The Keen Johnson Building was constructed in 1940, a Student Union Building, by the WPA. It is the only Art Deco style interior in the city of Richmond.

The history in the walls of the University have been thusly honored by the declaration of a portion of the University's campus as a Historic District. The University's campus truly upholds its name as the "Campus Beautiful."

Fashion The Key to Success

It's 8:00 a.m. and as Robert is abruptly awakened by the buzzing of his alarm clock, slowly he expresses some signs of life of his usual weekday morning routine. First, he showers and shaves then breakfast, of course, with David Hartman, and finally getting dressed. However, when he walks to the closet and swings open the doors, he finds himself faced with one of the biggest decisions — what he'll wear to his office that day.

Fashion and clothing are a spectrum of society where much emphasis is placed. Clothing makes an important statement about you, your taste, style, and status. Recently, much emphasis has been placed upon "dressing for success" in the business world. Hundreds of books tell one how to dress, but a few basic rules are of major concern when one enters a business career.

The viewpoint stated by Dr. Judith Leonard, a marketing instructor in the University's Business Department was conservative. Dr. Leonard has her undergraduate degree in clothing and textile merchandising and her Masters Degree in the social and psychological aspects of clothing.

For men, one should wear basic color suits, such as navy, gray, or black, in either solids or pinstripes. Shirts should either be white or light colors, such as blue or beige. A tie should always be worn with a suit. Ties should be of small prints or regimental stripes, never a plaid tie. All of one's accessories should match his suits. They should be simple and classic in style.

For women, the image is much more difficult to achieve and maintain in male dominated career areas. A female should always be dressed in a business suit, says Dr. Leonard, a woman is selling her brain, not her physic. Women's suits should also be in basic colors of blue, gray, and black. A simple blouse to accompany the suit is appropriate. Women's accessories should not be distracting. Jewelry, make-up, and hair styles should be simple.

The viewpoint stated by Ms.

Diane Vachon, a fashion merchandising instructor in the University's Home Economics Department, differed from that of Dr. Leonard.

Ms. Vachon feels that each person should try to add personal touches to his or her wardrobe because a conservative style of dress can be boring at times. If a woman is small in stature then a padded shoulder blazer can give the appearance of a larger more authoritative person. Individual characteristics are important in this sense.

If one wishes to become a success in their job area they are going to have to be aware of the fashion trends. All of these points are pieces to the final puzzle and image which one is trying to achieve to obtain success in the world of business.

A Test of the Wise

Shakespeare and Poe didn't have them, and they made it big. Most of you contend that your popularity could be just as grand; however, there is one thing standing in your way, those little blue books. They take on the hue of the walls of a padded cell and have about as much appeal as a can of hot beer.

Chances are it all happened some time during your first semester at the University. You were the little naive freshman — fresh out of high school comp. class. You were then introduced to a new dimension of testing — the dreaded blue book exam.

I'll never forget my first time. I was a freshman, enrolled in GSS 142. The day of the test was one of the hottest days I can ever remember. The doors of the University Building were before me. I stood at the steps, saying a short prayer, asking for a guardian angel to help me through my first blue book test. I didn't think He heard me, because little did I know what laid before me.

The blue books were dispersed among us, like we were on our way to the chair and this was our last meal.

You would think that any moron could fill out the necessary information to be placed on the cover, right? (Debatable I'm sure.) However, with an instructor shouting the necessity of "name, date, course number, and what you had for breakfast, etc.", it could become confusing.

I opened the book and found before me a vast emptiness, a void, a black hole, just waiting to be crammed with my knowledge of Agrarian Society. The questions seemed harmless enough, but so did Adolf Hitler! I began to write, finding that this paper had all the absorbent qualities of a roll of Rosie's Bounty. The "quicker-picker-upper" then began soaking up every last drop of ink from my only pen.

I frantically tried to organize myself because I had only 50 more minutes to finish this mess. I outlined and tried to get a mental picture of what to write.

I was on my third page and my arm and hand began to shake, uncontrollable, was I having some seizure, no just writers cramp setting in. Then if the cramps weren't enough my palms began to sweat also. I was falling apart at the seams! However, I was more together than that little cuss of a blue book! It had already unhinged itself and I had torn off the back cover in a fit of temporary insanity.

I had done all the damage I could do. I closed the blue book and I proceeded to slither from my seat. I tossed my wounded efforts upon the pile and I disappeared, like David Copperfield to the recluse of a bar (which shall remain nameless) where a stiff drink awaited my consumption; however, I had forgotten to put my name, ID, and course number on it!

Cooking Eastern Style: An Innovative Approach

But, as all good things must come to an end, you are caught red handed one day with all of your illegal cooking appliances. As you sign the forms in triplicate, concerning the admittal of guilt to your crime, you are convicted to see the director of safety and be put on social probation.

As you brood over your dilemma, while dining on the "cheap and reasonable" $450 a semester meal plan, you have given up all hope of cooking in your room again.

But, alas, there are other ways to have gourmet food in your room with LEGAL appliances! It just takes a little ingenuity and imagination to use every day appliances for cooking. Irons, hot rollers, portable space heaters, and electric blankets are invaluable to cooking.

Grilled sandwiches can be a delicacy with an iron. Simply wrap your sandwich in aluminum foil, not forgetting to spread margarine on both sides of the bread. Turn the iron on the medium heat setting and place the iron on one side of the sandwich for approximately five minutes on each side. If you have two irons it even works better! This method also works well with cold, leftover pizza. Place iron on top of the foil-wrapped slice of pizza. Use approximately the same amount of time as you would for a grilled sandwich.

An inconspicuous item as hot rollers or an electric blanket works wonders for heating up Pop-Tarts or a Danish. Remove rollers and replace with your wrapped Pop-Tart. This usually takes longer, about 10 minutes. If you have an electric blanket then take advantage of Bottom Left: Diann Severin demonstrates how she grills a sandwich with an iron. Top Right: These appliances can be confiscated and taken from the owner if found by the R.A. or dorm director. it and slip your Danish (wrapped of course) between the blanket. By the time you get ready for class, you'll have a hot breakfast—legally.

Portable heaters also come in handy. You can roast marshmallows, just like at a campfire! Place marshmallows on a skewer or a straightened out hanger in front of the heater. Don't get too close. If you want to impress someone try fixing S'mores. Place the roasted marshmallows and a square piece of chocolate between two squares of graham crackers. Delicious!

Remember, never leave your food or appliance unattended while cooking.

Soon you too can be cooking "Eastern style" with legal, everyday appliances!

Foreign Students Involving Themselves with Campus Organizations

India, China and West Germany are just a few of the countries from which students come to attend the University. Currently enrolled in the University are 130 students from foreign countries.

Why do these foreign students come so far from home? The reasons vary. For instance, Fabiana Chiu, a public relations major from Peru, came to the University because her older sister had attended school here upon the recommendation of friends in the United States. Other reasons include academics, location, size, low expenses, the friendliness of the faculty and students, or to escape from unstable countries.

Foreign students have disadvantages others may not experience. Unable to return often, these students go for long periods of time without seeing their families. As a result, many of them suffer from loneliness and homesickness.

To combat the loneliness, organizations on campus help them. The International Student Association is one such group. Students from different countries meet every two weeks and usually plan events on weekends when student participation diminishes. Anyone can attend the meetings, according to Alex Ovia, a finance major from Nigeria, president of the association.

All the members enjoy meeting other foreign students, as well as Americans.

Another problem facing foreign students, who live on campus, is where to go during breaks, such as Thanksgiving. Dean Jeanette Crockett's many duties include housing arrangements for students who have no where else to go. She said the University provides some type of housing for foreign students, either a dormitory room or other arrangements are made. In addition, one cafeteria on campus usually stays open to provide students with food, with the exception being the week of Christmas.

Whether these foreign students come to the University because of certain areas of study offered or to leave an unstable country, the University hopes to provide these students with a memorable and beneficial college experience.

High-Spirited Adventures!

Take off and join fellow students from the University on a high-spirited adventure; images of Europe's historic sights, the echo of exotic languages, and the fascinating tastes of native cuisine.

Numerous University students have spent time in Europe during summers past. Visiting lands such as Austria, Spain, France and Italy. KIES — Kentucky Institute for European Studies — is the syndicated efforts for these students travels and studies. It allows students to travel and study abroad, while gaining college credit by attending classes in various European countries.

Amy Hoffman, a senior French major, spent her time in France. "The Riviera was spectacular, everything was so cheap, compared to the rest of France," said Hoffman. "It was a great experience to meet new people and come home with such treasured memories."

From building snowmen in the Alps, to sleeping in a train station in Innsbruck, to cheering on the Gladiators in the Colosseum in Rome, or seeing the Pope at the Vatican, these students did have quite an adventuresome summer in Europe, bringing home memories that will last a lifetime.

Spring Fever

Warm weather, green trees, and multicolored flowers brought the promise of new life to Central Kentucky. Students emerged from their dorm rooms all over campus to enjoy the fresh air and sunny skies of a new spring season.

Weekends:

ENJOY IT!

The bell rings and it's all over for another week. It's Friday afternoon and as you leisurely stroll back from your 1:00 you see students carrying laundry baskets and suitcases to their cars for their weekend trek home. Your thoughts wonder as you think of the possible activities that are awaiting you at the University. How are you planning to spend your weekend?

You could take advantage of the solitude and spend your hours studying in your dorm room or at the library. If the walls start closing in you could venture to the serenity of the ravine and enjoy the outdoor weather.

But you ask, "how could I spend my entire weekend studying?" Maybe you could wonder downtown (and meet that perfect mate). If the munchies seem to be the culprit, you could head for Lexington's White Castle (a greasy cure-all). Realizing the relief of not having to report to that 8:00 the next morning. You might make your evening on the town an all nighter.

However, "Beverly Hills Cop" is playing at the Town

Cinema and even though you have already seen it twice, you could sit through it once more if someone tugged your arm hard enough. On the entertainment spectrum you could go to a sporting event, a musical recital, a theatrical performance, an art exhibit, or even ice skating in Lexington.

Perhaps, you'll find something to do with your sorority or fraternity, like a dance, a trip downtown, an intramural football game, or maybe just a rap with your brothers or sisters. The weekend can be a special time when lasting friendships are developed.

On the other hand, you might take advantage of open house and spend a nice quiet evening enjoying one another's companionship, besides, three's a crowd.

You enjoy the weekends because you can create your own forms of entertainment. With the vast activities found at the University on the weekends, whether social or scholastic, the weekends offer you numerous choices in how to spend your free hours til Monday morning once again rears its ugly head.

Textbooks Vs. Playbooks

What campus activity would put sorority against sorority, fraternity against fraternity, or dorm against dorm? Intramural sports, of course.

Intramural sports are activities which countless University students participate, from flag football to tennis. With team names like G for B (Go for Blood), The Running Utts, or Baker's Fault II; one will find students who are out to play tough and those who are out to play for fun.

Intramural teams are made up of different leagues, such as housing, fraternity, women's independent, and men's independent leagues. The different teams play in their perspective leagues. Then, the different league winners play the other league victors for the championship title, whether it be volleyball or softball.

Teams are made up of all types of University students: accounting, computer, recreation, and law enforcement majors. No matter what their diversity, all come together to play and compete. Most students admit the reason for playing is that they are just out to have a good time and enjoy sports.

Some, however, take intramurals more seriously. The Greek teams like the experience they can gain through Intramurals for other sporting events with their fellow Greeks, where competition and winning are taken more seriously. Other students, however, see Intramurals, "as a reason to get their thoughts out of a textbook and into a play book. It's a release from school pressure, and just a great way to get some exercise."

When team members are asked how they keep in shape, the answer one usually gets is a snicker of laughter, followed by, "we don't do anything." The women's teams do aerobics twice weekly to stay in shape and some even jog four or five times a week. Male teams practice with their fellow team members to keep them fit for competition.

Thompson

The team captains find it difficult to get the teams together to practice at times, especially when team members have tests to study for or homework because most students feel that academics must come first.

Is the Intramural Program well organized? The answer participants give is, "yes, when compared to many other regional schools." The University is rated highly by its leagues. Students also enjoy their freedom and exercise their right in organization. The students feel like it works well. Team members don't find a dominant control of Intramurals by the University, and they like that factor. The University also seems to want that student input and make-up, which makes the University's Intramural Program a winning success.

A Heritage of Kentucky

The fragrances of cinnamon and cloves linger in the air; as the fresh aromas drift from the kitchen. What can this mean but a special blend of cooking found only in Kentucky.

Known for its cooking heritage, Kentuckians are proud to display their specialities, which range from cornbread to bourbon balls.

Nothing is better than a hearty bowl of brown beans, seasoned with a ham hock and homemade cornbread to satisfy an appetite. Of course, a dinner isn't complete without dessert to compliment a fine meal. What more could you want to satisfy your craving but a slice of southern-baked pecan pie.

Many foods have originated in Kentucky. For dessert, transparent tarts are a favorite. These rich tarts originated in rural northern Kentucky, around Fleming and Mason counties. But, Kentucky is also the birthplace of Bibb lettuce (a green so tender that it can practically be eaten straight from the garden.) One cannot forget some of the most popular Kentucky dishes, such as the hot brown, a rich mixture of ham or turkey smothered in cheese. Also, burgoo and corn pudding have become labeled the popular fare for many Kentucky meals.

Kentuckians have adapted some foods until they become a southern speciality. Some of the classics include fried chicken, mashed potatoes and gravy, ham and biscuits, green beans, also cooked with a ham hock, and fried apples.

Kentucky cooking is a world of magical tastes, subtle yet rich delights and delicious southern specialities that makes the phrase "Kentucky cooking" quite tasteful.

Charles Dickens said it well — "It was the best of times, it was the worst of times." The year of 1984 was eventful: laden with tragedy and yet powered with revelry and a renewed patriotism.

The horrid sounds from the Persian Gulf were heard around the world, while the starving children of Ethiopia reached for a helping hand.

The U.S. elected its 50th President by a vast margin. Los Angeles was transformed into a mecca of hype, competition, and sportmanship for 16 Olympic days and nights. Culture Club's Boy George became a household word, whereas Nutra Sweet was launched in an all out invasion into the soft drinks of America.

While home in Kentucky, the events were varied and notable. Louisville's Humana Hospital witnessed its first artificial heart transplant, and the first woman to occupy the office of the Governor served her first year in office.

On the local scene, the University occupied a landmark in its history. President J.C. Powell retired his office, and Dr. H. Hanly Funderburk was selected to become the University's eighth president. Photo courtesy of Wide World Photos.

INTERVIEW

“What I’d like to accomplish is to make a good university a better one . . . ,” said
Dr. Hanly Funderburk

“What I’d like to accomplish is to make a good university a better one. I plan on doing this by getting as much involvement from various constituencies — faculty, students, staff, alumni, and the public in general,” said Dr. Hanly Funderburk, the University’s eighth president.

He said, “I think in a time when the resources are limited these groups should pull together to help improve the quality. What I’ve seen up to this point they’re willing to do that.”

During the early part of his administration, Funderburk visited with all the colleges individually to familiarize himself with their academic offerings. He also plans to meet with his support staff to further acquaint himself with the University.

By meeting with these groups separately, Funderburk feels he needs to allow everyone the chance to meet with him and ask him questions. “I don’t know a better way to do it, but to take the time and meet with them,” he said.

Acknowledging his responsibilities, the new president said, first of all, he is expected to carry out policies set by the Board of Regents. This duty is accomplished by the staff and faculty, who are involved in the day-to-day activities. He also commented he needs to provide the inspiration and management to achieve these goals and objectives.

Funderburk admitted that he was “not a student of management.” He said he has learned management skills “the hard way . . . by doing . . . and, I’m pretty good at it.” “Shared accountability” is summarized as his philosophy of management.

“Not every issue needs to be brought to the president’s desk for a decision, but it can be handled at various administrative levels,” he said. “When an issue is called to my attention, you can be sure that I will seek the input of those individuals who might be affected by the presidential decision,” he said.

constituencies will play an important role in his administration to build upon the University's tradition of excellence. He plans on meeting with the leadership of these groups to determine where resources are needed.

Funderburk feels by and large the University is well-managed and a respectable university. However, he said the University lacks the resources to improve its missions.

"Eastern Kentucky University can be no better than the faculty who teach in its classrooms, the administrative and support staffs who facilitate the learning process through enhancement of the learning environment, the alumni and other friends who support the University's mission, and the students who depend on the University to provide a quality education," he said. "Our challenges will be to maintain and retain a quality faculty, to provide sound financial management techniques to get the most from every state-appropriated dollar, to seek additional sources of funding from both state government and the private sector, to encourage active involvement of alumni and other friends, and to recruit and retain quality students."

G RADUATION

Anticipating a Dream

May Twelfth, Nineteen Hundred Eighty-Four, the day I have been anticipating. I can't believe it's time to put on my cap and gown and accept my diploma.

I reach my destiny with 1,400 graduates. As I sit in my chair, I see all the familiar faces that revive memories of my last four years at the University.

I look around for my roommates. We've been friends for three years and it's hard to imagine that we will be going our separate ways.

As I glance to the stands, I wonder where my dad is sitting. What is he thinking? Wasn't he the one who supported me through college and always gave me encouragement? I bet he's proud of me today.

I think back to the classes I've attended. The good times I've had and the struggles I have overcome. I wonder how I'll be able to remember all of these.

I feel so happy and excited, yet so scared and apprehensive. These past four years have been so exciting and yet so changing.

Now as the ceremony comes to an end so does a major part of my life. With a toss of my cap, I smile because I know I have reached my dream.

FOOTBALL

Tackles Another Year

The football season began like any other at the University. The Colonels were ranked high in most pre-season polls and people were already talking about tackling another national championship.

The season opened in front of a hometown crowd against the Youngstown State University Penguins. The Colonels finished the game with an impressive win and the talk continued: Another national championship?

Talks of another winning team was interrupted slightly when the Colonels fell to a less-talented East Tennessee team. But, they bounced right back with a narrow victory over Austin Peay.

The Colonels ended their season with an overall record of 8-4. Now, by most any standards, that's a good, solid winning season but not in Richmond, Kentucky.

They didn't go farther than the first game of the Division I-AA playoffs, which they lost to Middle Tennessee. To stop at the first game is almost tabu at the University. Other than just going to the playoffs they were the OVC Champions for the fourth straight year, the 1984-85 season marked the Colonels sixth consecutive appearance in the playoffs, not to mention that they lost only one conference game.

It seems anymore that if the Colonels don't go all the way, they haven't gone at all. This shows how accustomed to winning the University is. Coach Kidd said that many other coaches base their recruitment on the question: "Can this boy beat Eastern?" Other teams center their entire seasons around the Eastern game and rate themselves according to the outcome.

Kidd commented that when he recruits, he can guarantee the boy he'll "play for a champion."

This constant expertise on the University's part enables the other teams to get so emotionally ready for the game.

It also exerts much pressure on the players themselves.

Junior linebacker Anthony Johnson acknowledged that there was a tremendous amount of pressure on the players, but he added that most, if not all of the pressure, was caused by the players themselves. "I was lucky enough to come in on a championship team," Johnson said. Since most of the team had had the same experience, they keep the pressure constant. "You just get used to it."

Even without another national championship, Kidd doesn't feel the season was a failure. He said the team gained much experience and is already looking forward to next season. He admitted, "I can't wait to finish with lifting weights and get to spring practice."

COACHES

Always at Work

Eastern Kentucky University has long been known for their athletic programs and staffs. One of the better-known is football.

The University football program has a long tradition of quality that has derived from a staff that has been at the University for a combined total of seventy-five years.

The leader is Head Coach Roy Kidd, who has been serving Eastern in that capacity for 21 years. Closing in at second place is Defensive Backfield Coach Jack Ison. Ison has served under Kidd for 18 years.

The longevity doesn't stop there; however, it reaches every assistant coach on the staff. Offensive Backfield Coach Leon Hart is in his ninth season, while Joe Blankenship, linebacker coach, is heading into his eighth year.

Still, the numbers keep coming. Jim Tanara, down lineman coach, and Defensive End Coach Teddy Taylor have both been here six years. Kickers and Receivers Coach Rick Sang is at year number five.

But, length isn't all the staff has going for it. Five of the present coaches are also Eastern graduates. Staff Head Roy Kidd himself begins this tradition of Colonel grads. Ison, Taylor, Blankenship and Sang are also alumnus of the University.

Why so long and in the same place?

"I still enjoy it and Richmond is my home," said Kidd. His sentiments were echoed by Ison, "I really enjoy what I'm doing. I think I have one of the best jobs in America.”

 Kidd added that the duties of a coach are much more than what is seen on the field. “I enjoy the preparation,” he said. “It’s just like the players. We get up when we have tougher opponents to prepare for.”
 Coaching is a twenty-four-hour-a-day job. It’s definitely not an occupation that you leave at the office when you go home. It certainly helps the quality of work when the coaches enjoy it.
 Even after all these years.

MEN'S BASKETBALL

Makes the Score

The Eastern Kentucky University Colonels began the season achieving new goals and has continued throughout the year.

For the first time in many years the Colonels were ranked in pre-season polls. Depending upon the poll as high as third and fourth.

After the season started, the Colonels kept receiving honors. They were voted to have the best defense in the league and were ranked in the top five teams in the country for rebounds.

This defensive and rebounding ability made the Colonels a force to be reckoned with throughout the season. Unfortunately, the season was full of "could haves" according to Coach Max Good.

Good described the 1984-85 season as a frustrating one because of the many close and overtime losses suffered this year. He added that despite the frustrating outcomes the team kept "bouncing back."

The Colonels started their season on the road against Cincinnati where they sustained a two point defeat. They came back the next game to defeat Wilmington handily. But, the opening game proved to be an omen for the rest of the season.

It looked as if the Colonels were never going to just get their chance.

The most trouble has come from within the OVC itself. After beginning January with a win over Morehead, things went downhill. The Colonels were defeated consecutively by one point by Tennessee Tech and then Middle Tennessee by two points.

It got more frustrating.

The Colonels hosted Akron and lost by one point. This was not just a one point loss, but one that took five overtimes before the final buzzer went off. This set off a chain of aggravating over-time losses.

The Colonels finally came out on the winning end of an overtime against Middle Tennessee. This victory was definitely a welcome change for both team and fans.

Good said the team was "improving slowly." He expressed that with the increase of defense, the scoring percentage went down. This decrease was largely due to the absence of Tony Parris because of a bad ankle. Parris held the title of leading freshman scorer in the country last year.

Good said it has been a very successful year and was a group effort. "We have been tremendously pleased with the team effort."

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

A Season of Success

According to Coach Dianne Murphy, the 1984-85 Lady Colonels were a lot better than people realized. She said that the "opposing coaches and teams respect the University's program more than the students here." She added her biggest disappointment this season was "the community and students don't realize how strong the program is. We had a very good team this year."

To illustrate this point, she cited the strengths of the team; the team was versatile and very flexible. They had a strong inside game, as well as, a good perimeter game. Also, most of the individual players could play more than one position. In defense, the team led the Ohio Valley Conference.

Offensively, the Lady Colonels were strong, too. Four players averaged over ten points per game. This increased the amount of versatility and flexibility too, because the team did not have to rely on one person to score all of the time.

The Lady Colonels compiled a record of 17-8. In the OVC, the team compiled a record of 7-5. This is very good considering the quality of the teams in the conference. Two teams in the conference, Tennessee Tech and Middle Tennessee, lost in the first round of the NCAA, but the teams that beat them were both in the Final Four.

The Lady Colonels also made a good showing in the Holiday Classic, a tournament hosted at the University. The team finished second to Western. Western went on to the NCAA Final Four.

Thompson

There were four seniors on the Lady Colonels this season: Lori Hines, Shannon Brady, Tina Cottle, and Marcia Haney. According to Coach Dianne Murphy, all four "played well all year, were very coachable, shared the goals of hard work and success, and will be hard to replace.”

Co-captains Shannon Brady and Tina Cottle both averaged over 11 points per game, and Tina Cottle was named to the first team all OVC at the close of the season.

Juniors Margy Shelton and Angela Fletcher were also an integral part of the team’s success. Angela Fletcher, who averaged over 13 points per game, was named to the second team all-OVC at the close of the season.

Coach Dianne Murphy said that Van Marshel, a sophomore, did “very good things at the end of the season,” and she “looks for good things” from her in the future.

Coach Murphy also said that

Thompson

Carla Coffey, a freshman, played well. She said that Coffey was "The most intense freshman she's ever seen anywhere she has coached."

Coach Murphy says that each team has its "own chemistry and its own character" and the future looks bright for the Lady Colonels.

FIELD HOCKEY

Goes for the Goal

Thompson

The University's field hockey team had an interesting season of mixed results. They ended seven and 13 for the entire season. Coach Lynne Harvel said, "We had a lot of trouble blending the players together and getting the team to play together as a team."

The team had seven returning starters, five of which were seniors. Also, joining the team was Theresa Eckert, a transfer student with two years of team experience. "She was the bright spot of the season," stated Harvel. "She played extremely well and is a real positive person."

Some freshmen saw playing time this season with Sue Gladding leading the way. "Sue was our number one substitute player during the season," said Harvel.

The team captains were seniors Mary Gavin, Teresa Powell, and Ann Daugherty. "Mary Gavin was a real spark for the team," Harvel commented. "Teresa Powell was high scorer for the season with 11 goals, and Ann Daugherty did a really good job playing defense."

The dedication of the new field highlighted the University Invitational. Harvel commented, "It has a nice, smooth surface, has a much better and safer surface than we've ever had before, and it's much easier to play on."

"This season," ended Harvel, "a mixture of a lot of experience and a lot of youngsters made up the team. All in all, the team improved throughout the season."

VOLLEYBALL

Goes to the Net

Thompson

The University women's volleyball team exemplified the theme, "The Winning Attitude," throughout the season.

As defending Ohio Valley Conference champions for the third year, the team compiled a win-loss record of 27-12. After defeating Tennessee Tech at the end of the season, the Colonels captured their fourth consecutive OVC championship.

The team received an automatic bid to the NCAA tournament. Although they lost to Tennessee in the first round of the tournament, the Colonels were the only OVC women's volleyball team to ever receive an automatic bid to the NCAA.

The team was ranked first in the country by the Collegiate Volleyball Coaches Association in blocks with an average of 8-45.

According to Coach Geri Polvino, the Colonels experienced "a season of firsts." Besides receiving the bid to the NCAA, the team has an assistant coach for the first time, former graduate student, Linda Dawson, filled this position. Also, for the first time, the OVC chose an all-conference team, to which three University players were named.

Senior Charlotte Gillespie, was ranked third in the nation in blocks, was an All-OVC player. Gillespie has been an integral part of four OVC championship teams.

Junior Lisa Tecca, who was ranked fourth in the nation in blocks, and sophomore middle attacker and blocker Angela Boykins were also named as All-OVC players.

Coach Polvino feels that the volleyball "program took a major step forward this year, with most facets being upgraded." Gillespie is the only senior on the team. So, "the winning attitude should continue to prevail."

MEN'S CROSS COUNTRY

Running for Another Title

Thompson

The University's men's cross country team won their second OVC title in the last five years this season, in a close way over Akron.

Fifth-year Coach Rick Erdmann's team had 34 points in the championship meet, compared to 37 for Akron, with everyone else far back in the field.

It would have been the men's second-straight title, but they were dropped to third place in 1983 after winning the OVC because of having an ineligible player.

The team has finished in the top three in the conference each of the last three years.

"We have a nucleus of underclassmen," Erdmann said, including three of his top five runners.

But Erdmann suffered a big loss in number one runner Jay Hodge. Hodge won the OVC in 1984 in a course-record time of 25:27.

Three other University runners finished in the top eight in the OVC meet.

The last two years have been quite a come back for the team after cross country was dropped as a sport for one year in 1982.

Erdmann said his team would have to be favored to repeat their title-winning effort in 1985, but not without some tough competition.

Rick Erdmann is not used to losing. But, then he has never had to worry about it in his three years as coach of the University's women's cross country team.

Erdmann's squads have won the OVC Championship Meet each of the last three years and are favored to take a fourth title in 1985.

The entire 1984 team will be returning for 1985 and will have only three seniors.

"The women have beaten every team in the state," Erdmann said. They defeated a total of 20 schools last year.

In the OVC title meet, the University placed five runners among the top 11 finishers.

Freshman Christine Snow set a new course record as she won the meet in a time of 17:41.

Eastern had a team score of 31, to second-place Murray's 42 and Akron's 76 points.

MEN'S SWIMMING

Makes A Splash

Penegor

Men's Swimming Coach Dan Lichty termed this season as one of a "building year." Lichty said last year they lost three of their strongest swimmers; all of whom held records in their specialties.

Lichty also makes the point that the Eels faced a tough schedule this year. They faced big SEC schools such as UK and Georgia as well as many other strong schools. Lichty said the significance of that is that nobody clobbered them. All losses were close ones, even to those big schools.

"This is not one of our strongest teams in terms of winning," said Lichty but reiterated the close losses.

Lichty observed that they had a good freshman class, "it will take a few years to get seasoned. We're extremely proud of our freshmen."

The team was lead by senior tri-captains Don Combs, Guy Frable, and Scott Vennefron, who holds the school 200 butterfly record.

These captains were assisted by the likes of Dave Mercer, who holds the school record for the 100 butterfly; Mike Kirsch who holds both school records for the breaststroke; and Mark Eschliman, who has qualified for the NCAA Zone Championship in diving.

The Eels captured the Kentucky Intercollegiate Championship again.

Lichty concluded, "We're swimming well for what we have."

WOMEN'S SWIMMING

Takes the Plunge

Lambert

For Coach Dan Lichty having a women's swimming team was "a new experience" and "a first ever."

Women have been on the Electrifying Eels team before but usually only in diving capacities, and never had their own team.

Lichty said they got a late start on recruiting because they were waiting to know whether or not there would be a team. As a result, only five of the girls are here on scholarships and the others are walk-ons. He added that he was very pleased with the turn-out of the team.

Lichty mentioned that most women don't have a strong swimming background. He said because of this the women constantly improve. He added just about every time they get in the water, they set a new personal record for themselves.

Lichty noted that success is gauged on the first year of competition. "Nobody killed us or totally destroyed us," Lichty said.

The women were led by senior captain Karen Hofmann who has lettered twice with the men's team as a diver. Hofmann has qualified for the NCAA Zone Championships. Melanie McIntosh returned, also having completed in diving with the men's team for two years, to serve as a captain.

Lichty said these two "have given good leadership" and "act as a buffer" for those who don't know his methods.

"We're excited the women's team is doing as well as it is," Lichty said. They also won the Kentucky Intercollegiate Championship.

RIFLE

Takes a Shot at It

Thompson

Captain Mike McNamara, rifle team coach, summed up the season as "great."

He especially thought this, as the team packed to leave for the National Championships held at West Point. McNamara and his team agreed that their biggest rival and opponent was West Virginia University but were sure they could finish in the top three.

"This year is an exact repetition of last year," McNamara said. "We're in the exact same position."

McNamara explained that after West Virginia, the number one team, there were no more than 20 points separating team two through four. These teams consist of Eastern, Murray and Tennessee Tech. During the season, these teams have traded wins and losses, some with only a three point difference.

McNamara said he was satisfied with the team's performance at this point. He said he felt that they were ready to go to Nationals; physically and mentally they were ready to go.

The team was led by senior Mike Bender who had a season average of 1157 on small boar and 379.2 for air rifle. Bender was followed closely by Scott Rupp who finished with averages of 1152.4 and 373.5. The number three position was held by Ana Hogrefe with and 1144.1 average in small boar and 378.1 air rifle.

Hogrefe said going into the Nationals that the team had a good attitude and would make a good team effort.

She added that they had been working and practicing hard together.

"The whole team has the potential and ability to shoot good," Hogrefe said.

MEN'S TENNIS

Still Serving It Up

"Inexperience is the key word," said Tom Higgins, men's tennis coach, when describing the squad, which features five freshman among the 11 total players.

In his 12-season tenure at the University, Higgins' teams have finished second in the Ohio Valley Conference a total of three times (the last in 1982) but have yet to capture a title.

The 11-15 squad finished fourth among the eight teams in the conference, behind Murray, Middle Tennessee and Morehead.

Todd Clements and Todd Wise held the number one and number two positions respectively for their entire four-year careers at the University.

Clements was third in the conference in number one singles with a 20-9 record. While in the number two singles, Wise finished second with a record of 10-10.

The doubles team of Wise and Clements also placed second in the OVC with a 24-8 record.

Higgins said he got "a couple of real good kids" among his freshman recruits.

WOMEN'S TENNIS

Going for the Net

Lambert

The strength of the women's tennis team laid in its individuals, who achieved vast awards and honors. According to Sandra Martin, women's tennis coach, pressure was put on the singles positions 1-4 and the number one doubles.

"We depend on them and put pressure on them to win," said Martin. "They all put forth a good individual performance."

During the fall season, Susan Wilson, a senior, won the state tournament for the number three position and lost only one match in regular season. Along with Wilson, Chris Haulbauer was state runner-up at number two, and Claudia Porras also captured state runner-up at the first position. Sharing with the individual honors, the number one doubles team of Haulbauer and Porras also captured state runner-up title.

The spring season was also good to the Colonels with Porras winning the OVC in spot number two. Her teammate, Kristi Spangenberg won the OVC position four, and Laura Ann Hesselbrock captured the number five position.

"I felt that they reached most of their potential," commented Martin. "I think they did very well."

GOLF

Executing Toward Victory

The 1984 Colonel's spring team became one of the best ever. They won three out of six tournaments including first place in the Ohio Valley Conference.

Russ Barger, a sophomore, established himself as one of the top golfers in the country at a college level. He won the OVC individual player for the second year. Barger also was a medalist in the University Invitational.

Barry Wehrman, a graduate student, made the all OVC team and placed in the top five. Jim Duignan, a senior, placed second at the Murray

State Invitational. Senior Kelly Finney had the best round in competition at the University Invitational with a 30.

West Virginia, South Carolina, and North Carolina were among the states that the Colonels traveled, taking their talents in force. They finished in the top 11 or better at all three locations.

It will be a rebuilding time for the Colonels next spring because of their loss of eight players, four of which were seniors. But, according to the fall Interim Coach Paul Motley, "We'll surprise a lot of people."

BASEBALL

Keeps Hitting Away

Lambert

The 1983 spring season was a successful one for the Colonels. The Colonels were champs not only for their OVC division but also for the entire OVC.

Head Coach Jim Ward said he was satisfied with his team's accomplishments and overall record of 30-19. "We achieved all of our goals. We were the northern division champion of the OVC and the OVC tournament champion"

The Colonels won the northern division of the OVC with a league record of 13-14. By defeating Murray State in the OVC double elimination tournament, Eastern became the league representative for the NCAA tournament.

Though the Colonels won the OVC title eight times before, they had never appeared in the NCAA tournament. "I was very pleased with the effort and intensity that our players exhibited in NCAA play," Ward commented.

In NCAA play, Ward said he felt his team made a good showing. "We became the first ECU athletic team ever to beat a Division I team in any sport. They achieved this by beating Appalachian State."

A large part of the credit for this achievement goes to senior infielder Tim Hofstetter. Ward termed his performance as outstanding. During the game, Hofstetter was 8 for 14 at the plate. Hofstetter was also named to NCAA all-south regional all-star team.

Other extraordinary players also took the field for the Colonels this year.

One of these players was pitcher Brad Evans. He was named all OVC player. Evans, a freshman, had a win-loss record of 9-3 for the season. David Butcher was also named all OVC player.

Futhermore, noteworthy was the performance of infielder Chad Elswick. Elswick hit 16 home runs this season which set a new school record.

Ward concluded, "I was very pleased with the team's performance this year."

MEN'S TRACK Keeps on Running

Head Track Coach Rick Erdmann said he was pleased overall with the efforts and performances of the team this year.

The Colonels began by capturing the OVC title during the indoor season. According to Erdmann, this was the first time that had happened.

Larry White, a junior from Berea, KY, sparked the Colonels considerably during their quest. White won both the long jump and triple jump events. White was also named OVC Indoor Track Athlete of the year.

As Assistant Track Coach Tim Moore pointed out, no team owes its accomplishments to any one person. Other members who were very instrumental in the first place title were sprinters Pat Woods and Vincent Scott.

Moore also gave much credit to West German Andy Mueller and Jay Hodge for their outstanding distance running along with Andre Fincher and Roger Chapman for their contributions in the 800 meters.

Helping with the achievement of placing second in the OVC outdoor season was Kenny Wilson. Wilson won first in the high jump of the OVC with a 7-ft. mark. Mueller was again "exceptional in several events," said Moore.

"It was a team effort," commented Moore. "Especially during the indoor season. They got together, realized they had a shot at winning, gave 100 percent and won it."

WOMEN'S TRACK

The Streak Continues

Thompson

In 1983, before Rick Erdmann assumed the head coaching position of the University's women's track team, the squad had never won the Becky Boone Relays, a meet they have hosted for 12 years.

But, now, Erdmann's team owns a pair of victories in the event, along with two consecutive Ohio Valley Conference titles.

The drastic turnaround for the women may seem coincidental with Erdmann's arrival as coach after having spent two years with the men's team, but he attributes the new-found success to better management of the program and simply better athletes.

A classic example to support the coach's comment is Pam Raglin, the freshman sensation who was selected the 1984 OVC Female Athlete of the Year. Raglin participated in five of the 14 school records set by the team. She also won the 1,500-meter run and was one-fourth of the winning sprint medleys relay team at the Becky Boone Relays.

Rose Gilmore, owner of the University's third Becky Boone victory with a time of 11.88 in the 100-meter dash, also finished second in the 200-meter dash.

Erdmann said his team was most concerned with the relays during the year, calling them the highlight of the season. He added, "They're more important than the OVC — most prestigious — to us."

1977-1984

The J.C. Powell Years

"How will we remember the administration of this soft-spoken man, with his dry sense of humor, who for more than eight years was charged with leading one of the nation's most highly respected regional universities?" asked Dr. John D. Rowlett, University vice-president for academic affairs and research.

"We will remember J. C. Powell for his skillful and cool-headed guidance of the institution through a period of years when we were buffeted by double-digit inflation, experienced what seemed to be an endless series of budget reductions, and saw state appropriations lag far behind our demonstrable needs," said Rowlett.

Powell, who has served the University for 24 years, the last eight as president, set the goal of improving quality when he was instated as president. The administration urged the building of strength in programs and implemented a formal planning program.

"Quality is a goal that one continues to strive for. Our future depends on how successful the leaders are in demonstrating the needs for higher education. There are three pressing needs: increase of wages and salaries for faculty and staff, increase of funding for instructional and support equipment, and increase of support for the maintenance of the physical plant," said Powell.

Besides improving the quality of programs, Powell encouraged the recruitment of superior students through the Foundation Scholars Program, said Tim Cowhig, president of the University Student Association and student member of the Board of Regents.

Powell said he's noticed a beneficial change in students in the 1980s. They are greatly concerned about what they are learning. The students' goals changed from going through the processes to valuing the material they are learning.

A group of more than 500 persons honored Powell and his wife, Downey, at the J. C. Powell Appreciation Reception, December 13, at the University. Representatives from the Commonwealth of Kentucky, higher education, the local community, and the University's alumni, faculty and students.

Governor Martha Layne Collins proclaimed December 13, 1984, as J. C. Powell Appreciation Day. "President Powell deserved full appreciation from all the Commonwealth citizens for his dedicated efforts to provide quality education in Kentucky and for the immeasurable contributions he has made to the future of so many young people over the years," said Gov. Collins.

After his retirement, December 31, Powell plans to spend some time at his lakeside cabin in Laurel County, playing golf, and working with his hands around his new home.

President and Mrs. J. C. Powell

During his presidential term, Powell awarded one-third of the 47,000 graduate degrees. Powell said, "the University had a proud tradition of excellence supported by a strong Alumni Association." On behalf of the Alumni Association, President William C. Dosch, presented the Powells with a check to be used for European vacation.

In a letter read at the dinner, Powell's daughters wrote: "People spend years diligently working toward the goal of retirement. You have put more than time into your work. Your gifts of listening and problem-solving have helped many young people meet their goals, including the two young people you came home to at night!"

Dr. Hanly Funderburk is chosen as the new President of Eastern Kentucky University

"Hanly Funderburk possesses the qualities to serve Eastern in a most outstanding manner," said Henry Stratton, chairman of the University's Board of Regents.

"We appreciate his accomplishments," as a former president of Auburn University and chancellor of Auburn University at Montgomery.

A search Committee composed of six members of the University Board of Regents, a 15-member Faculty/Staff Advisory Committee, a nine-member Student Advisory Committee, and an Alumni Advisory Committee began their selection process in May. On November 5, the Committee announced the three finalists, which included Funderburk.

On November 27, Funderburk was named as the University's eighth president in its 78-year history.

Funderburk was born June 19, 1931, in Carrollton, Alabama, where he attended both elementary and secondary school. Following his graduation from Carrollton High School in 1949, he received a bachelor of science degree in agricultural science from Auburn University in 1953.

In 1956 he returned to his alma mater after three years in the U.S. Army; he earned a master of science degree in botany and researching the action of herbicides.

Dr. Funderburk continued

his education and research as a graduate research assistant at Louisiana State University earning a Ph.D. degree in plant physiology in 1961.

Supervising development of a physical plant valued at more than $20 million, designing of academic programs for 5,000 undergraduate and graduate students and recruiting of quality faculty and staff were some of his accomplishments as vice-president and chief administrator at Auburn University at Montgomery.

In 1978 Dr. Funderburk was named Auburn University at Montgomery's chancellor. By then the university had a $16 million operating budget, an enrollment that exceeded 5,000 students and a new $10 million building program.

Funderburk and the University's new First Lady, Helen Hanson Funderburk, have two children, Debra Elaine, 29, and Kenneth Cliff, 25, and the grandparents of a two-and-a-half year old granddaughter.

Expressing his sentiments toward the University, Funderburk said during the selection process he was impressed with the campus as a whole and the people whom he came in contact with.

Henry D. Stratton, Chairman of the Board, appointed a committee consisting of six board members to conduct the search for a replacement to retiring President J.C. Powell. To aid in the search process advisory committees were formed from faculty/staff, students, and alumni.

A total of 159 individuals were nominated or made application, 85 of these completed a required questionnaire and were evaluated by the advisory committees. The advisory committees identified 27 individuals from which the Search Committee selected 19.

Three finalist were eventually invited to the campus. Stratton commented, "We are convinced that we have identified three superior individuals. Any, of whom, can do an excellent job of providing leadership to Eastern." John Keith added that the remainder of the process would involve mutual assessment between the candidate and the University.

On Monday, November 26, 1984, the Board unanimously elected Hanly Funderburk as the University's eighth president. Stratton noted that the decision to offer Funderburk the presidency followed an "open and comprehensive national search" and was reached after "careful consideration of the immediate and future needs of the University."

Accepting the presidency Funderburk said his first priority would be to "establish a strong working relationship with the faculty and staff, students, and alumni. To refine Eastern's programs and service to Eastern and Central Kentucky."

Varied Duties Are Performed by the Vice Presidents

Spending unobservable and seldom acknowledged hours of work, the University Vice-presidents involve themselves in all phases of the University. Each one of these men are engaged in a different aspect of the administration process.

The Office of Business Affairs, under the direction of Earl Baldwin, is responsible for all the business services and transactions at the University, including the telephone system, printing services, the bookstore and food services.

Donald Feltner, Vice-president for University Relations Development, directs the Divisions of Development, Alumni Affairs, and Public Information in order to maintain a positive identity of the University.

Providing students with programs that enhance their stay at the University, Dr. Thomas D. Meyers, Vice-President for Student Affairs, oversees residence hall programs, student health services and student activities.

Registration, graduation, class scheduling and transcripts are handled in the Office of Academic Affairs, under the direction of Dr. John D. Rowlett.

The Vice-president for Administrative Affairs, under Dr. William E. Sexton, organizes the management of academic computing, the Hummel Planetarium and the radio and television stations.

Together, the Vice-presidents conduct the operations of the University.

Dr. Robert R. Martin

President Emeritus Robert R. Martin is using his experience in education during his second term in the Kentucky Senate. First elected to the Senate in 1976 Martin has served as President of Eastern Kentucky University for 16 years.

Before that he had served the Commonwealth as Superintendent of Public Institution and Secretary of Finance.

As a member of the Senate he is serving on the Education Committee, and the Sub-Committee on Higher Education. The Welfare Committee also receives his attention.

He remains active at his alma mater by attending ball-games and special functions. He was in attendance at the J.C. Powell Appreciation Dinner and Dr. Hanly Funderburk's introductory meeting with Governor Martha Layne Collins at the State Capitol in Frankfort.

Dwight Phillips

Hall of Fame Recipient

The Hall of Fame recipient is Dwight Phillips a senior from Louisville, Ky. Dwight was surprised when he discovered he was selected for this distinguished honor. The receiver of the award is one of the nine outstanding students which are chosen by the individual colleges. Dwight, a College of Business student, plans to attend law school after graduating from the University.

While attending the University, Dwight has received several honors, including: Deans List, President Harry S. Truman Scholarship nominee, Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges, and Outstanding Student for the College of Business.

Dwight is active in several University organizations. They are Gamma Beta Phi, which he was chairman of the applications committee for; Sigma Tau Pi, Finance Club and Financial Management Association.

The idea of a small campus atmosphere persuaded the senior to attend this University. The instructor's attitudes and methods impressed him as he became more involved with the University. Dwight received a co-op job and credit for a business internship at The Courier Journal personnel office.

When asked about what advice he might give other students, Dwight stated, "you (the students) should re-think all the decisions you make about college and remember the reason you are here which is to go to school."

Top and Above: Dwight has developed good library skills from four years of using the Crabbe Library as a place to study and research.

Charles Gibson leaves his position as the Dean of the Graduate School

Offering over thirty Master's Degree programs, the Graduate School is a unique opportunity for students wanting to further their education beyond the traditional four-year degree. To be admitted to the University's Graduate School, a student must have a 2.4 grade point average, an undergraduate degree and must receive a sufficient score on the Graduate Record Examination.

According to Dean Charles Gibson, the Graduate School provides good preparation for students continuing on to doctoral level degrees. Excellent experience is also provided by the school for students who wish to become teachers.

Dean Gibson said the University's Graduate School compares favorably with other regional schools because of "the quality and breadth of the programs."

The Graduate School is in the second year of a five-year program evaluation in which all graduate programs are reviewed. Dean Gibson, said, "The goal of the evaluation is to improve the quality of offerings and consolidate whatever we do have.

After Dr. Gibson's retirement, effective January 1, 1985, the University will choose an acting dean, who will serve until June 30, 1985.

The College's areas of study are Emergency Medical Care,

Environmental Health Science, Health Record Science, Medical Assisting Technology, Medical Technology Lab, Baccalaureate Nursing, Associate Degree Nursing, Occupational Therapy, and continuing education. These areas of study include classroom work and practical experience through clinical.

Dean Gale believes the students who finish one of the programs in the College do achieve their dreams. Some students may not work in this area because of the academic rigor in the College.

Mrs. Betty J. Thompson, assistant professor of medical technology, was voted the Outstanding Teacher for the College of Allied Health and Nursing. Mrs. Thompson has been with the University five years.

Being active in University organizations and functions is what Nancy Brennen feels helped her become the Outstanding Student for the College of Allied Health and Nursing. Nancy has been active with the Catholic Newman Center, is a member of Student Occupational Therapy Association, Mortar Board Honor Society, and Lambda Sigma Sophomore Honor Society.

College of Applied Arts and Technology

The College of Applied Arts and Technology celebrated its 75th year anniversary on October 13, 1984, by sponsoring a luncheon and guest speakers for the visiting alumni and faculty.

The College includes five departments, which offer both majors and minors in their fields: Agriculture, Home Economics, Industrial Education and Technology, Mass Communications, Military Science, and a minor in Aviation.

The Interior Design program in the Home Economics Department was accredited by FIDER, Foundation for Interior design and Education Research. FIDER is a New York based organization. The University received the second accredited Interior Design Program in Kentucky.

The Department of Agriculture provides practical work experience for students on farms and in greenhouses. Also, most students in this department participate in unique co-operative education. Their program uses the split-semester system where students go to school for eight weeks and work for eight weeks. According to dean Kenneth Hansson, "Co-op is a very important part of this type of college."

Chartering of the student chapter of the Society of Manufacturing Engineers took place on September 24, 1984. Society of Manufacturing Engineers, SME, is a professional society dedicated to the advancement of manufacturing engineers, technologists, and managers. The highlight of the chartering ceremony was a talk given by Mr. Forrest D.

Dr. Danny Britt, professor of Agriculture, received the Outstanding Teacher award. Dr. Britt was surprised and pleased with the honor.

Providing students with the chance to enrich their cultural life is one goal of the College of Arts and Humanities

At one point, every University student has experienced a course in the College of Arts and Humanities. Each year the enrollment of the College is between 9,000 to 10,000 students; most are taking English or humanities courses as a part of their general education requirements.

According to Dean John Long, "Since the University is an open admissions University, it is difficult to reach the students effectively." The College separates students according to their ability by offering honors and remedial programs.

The College has two purposes at the University, said Dean Long. One of them is to provide instruction leading to a degree in Art, English, Foreign Languages, Music, Philosophy and Religion, and Speech and Theatre Arts. Secondly, the College has a responsibility to all students to provide them classroom instruction and offer them a chance to attend events which are educational and enrich their cultural life.

The students and faculty furnish the University community with art exhibits, theatre productions, humanities forums and musical recitals. The College publishes a schedule of events available to faculty and students.

The College of Business provides many degree programs, such as computer information systems, marketing and management. As the number of students has increased, so has the area of computers. The College has added a micro-computer lab. "We feel we have to be moving in that area," said Alfred Patrick, acting dean. The College is working to increase computer availability and to add to the micro-computer lab.

In addition to improved study areas in the College, they have also made improvements in the staff, like the addition of doctoral faculty. "We have an excellent faculty who have a lot to offer students, they have a lot of first hand experience before coming to our staff," stated Patrick.

As opposed to additions and improvements, the Coal Mining Administration major has been deleted from the College of Business. Due to the lack of enrollment, the program, which was considered of major importance for Kentucky, was suspended.

Students are learning to use Computers as a teaching device in the College of Education

In the summer of 1984 the College of Education had a faculty workshop to familiarize the teachers with the use of computers as a teaching device. Dean Dixon Barr hopes to prepare students in the College of Education to use computers for instructional purposes when they start their teaching career. Using computers as a teaching device consist of finding appropriate software packages to use with different subjects and grade levels.

The College of Education students get experience early in their college career at Model Laboratory School, which is the only laboratory school in the state. With the students getting hands-on experience in their first or second semester they discover if teaching is what they want to pursue. According to Dean Barr, "Better students are entering and leaving the College of Education due to the raised emission and exit standards."

The Outstanding Teacher for the College of Education is Dr. Joanna Paterno. Dr. Paterno is an assistant professor of curriculum and instruction.

Rebecca E. Ostrander was surprised to find out that she was chosen as the Outstanding Student for the College of Education. She felt that her participation in campus organizations like Sigma Tau Alpha, the Wesley Foundation and hard work helped her achieve the honor of outstanding student.

The three departments in the College of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics are designed to prepare their students for various careers of the future.

The Department of Health Education provides programs in Health Education with a major or minor in school health education or community health education. The department also teaches personal and community health as a general education requirement for all of its students.

The Department of Physical Education offers programs to prepare students for both teaching and non-teaching positions. The major in physical education has six options from which students may choose.

The Department of Recreation and Park Administration offers programs to develop competences needed for administration, supervision, and leadership of recreational services.

Dean Russell Bogue said, "I feel that the different areas of our College are by far the best in Kentucky and the surrounding areas. due to fine faculty and the cooperation of fine students." Bogue added, "students are the most important in all situations; therefore, we are always redoing the curriculum to help to meet students needs."

According to Dean Truett Ricks, "Across the United States, we are one of the top schools in terms of quality of our Bachelor's and Master's Degree programs in law enforcement, corrections, and security."

On October 12, the first on-campus alumni chapter was chartered for the College of Law Enforcement. Dr. Ron Wolfe, President of the University Alumni Chapter, presented this charter. For this first year, faculty and students wrote by-laws and selected officers. In order to be a member of the college of law Enforcement Alumni Chapter, one must be a member of the University's Alumni Society. In conjunction with the chartering of the new chapter, the College had a conference the weekend of October 12, deal-

On March 27, and 28, the College sponsored a career day open to all students interested in Law Enforcement. Approximately fifty agencies were represented from all over the United States. Some of the more prominent recruiters were from the F.B.I., Secret Service, I.R.S., U.S. Forestry, and U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The Outstanding Teacher chosen for the College was Colonel Wofford White. Col. White died May 1, 1984.

Norma Baxter Sizemore, a corrections major, is the Outstanding Student for the College of Law Enforcement. Norma was surprised in being chosen as the outstanding student. She felt that her experiences at home and work and her family's support helped her do well in her studies at the University.

Students can study in the areas of Biology, Chemistry, Computer Science, Earth Science, Environmental Resources, Fisheries Management, Geology, Mathematics, Microbiology, Physics, Statistics, and Wildlife Management.

The College gained several new faculty members this year with four new instructors in mathematics. Dean Batch said students should get to know their instructors. The instructors in the College of Natural and Mathematical Sciences can be very helpful in finding or getting jobs. The College of Social and Behavioral Sciences offers the only paralegal science program in the state that is accredited by the Bar Association. The College also offers degrees in Anthropology, Sociology, Social Work, Economics, Geography, Planning and Development, Legal Assistance, History, Political Science, Transportation, and Psychology.

According to Dean Russell Enzie, this College has a major concern with the quality of its programs. The suspension of the Master's Degree in sociology and in general psychology and the Bachelor of Arts Degree in planning due to lack of student interest, helped to improve the College's other areas of study. Because of this increase in resources, the improvement and availability of equipment for classes was possible, said Dean Enzie.

Dr. Marc Goldstein was chosen as the Outstanding Teacher for the College of Social and Behavioral Sciences. Dr. Goldstein, a sociology professor, has been with the University for eight years.

Chosen as the Outstanding Student was Ana Lisa Hogrefe. She has been active in such political clubs as the Young Democrats and the Council on International Relations and United Nations Affairs. Ho-

The Marching Maroons

Devoted Enthusiasm

During the late afternoon, the Begley parking lot is occupied by the enthusiasm of the Marching Maroons. Practicing around two hours a day, the band's devotion unites the group as one.

Despite the individual's moaning and aching muscles, each member strives for a rewarding performance. Creating a unique feeling, they capture the spirit of its audience at football and basketball games, pep rallies, parades, and indoor concerts.

For his third year as band director, Robert Belsar strives to make the Marching Maroons number one in the state. Although he assists the members, he states that he could not have a good band without their talent. Belsar also arranges all the music performed by the band, which gives them an edge by being able to use unpublished music.

When asked what the band's goals were for the year, Belsar said their main purpose is to entertain and produce spirit in the crowd.

"Penguin Busters", a spirit raiser used at the first football game of the season against the Youngstown State Penguins, was an enthusiastically active routine with pyramids, and gymnastics set to the popular hit song "Ghostbusters". Led by their sponsor, Dr. Skip Daugherty and co-captains Mike Witzerman and Kim Kidd during the football season, and Leesa Newby and Kelly McKnight during the basketball season, the cheerleaders performed routines similar to "Penguin Busters" at home football and basketball games.

The cheerleaders work out three times a week for three hours during the regular season. During the pre-game season they attended UCA camp at Virginia Tech. They also have a concentrated practice the second week in August, and practice every day the first week of classes. In these practices they perfect cheers and partner stunts, and work on new cheers and timing.

This year the team had to make a lot of adjustments due to freak accidents which affected five out of 12 squad members. However, the 1984-85 University cheerleaders not only added a lot of spirit and enthusiasm to the atmosphere of the various sporting events, but portrayed a culmination of much hard work and dedication which can serve to be an inspiration to others seeking goals here at the University.

The Milestone

Providing you with a tangible source to reflect your college experience.

When you reflect back on your college career twenty years down the road, what will you remember, how do you want to remember it and what will you reflect on? All of these points are goals which the Milestone staff attempt in their yearly endeavors.

The staff compiles pictures, copy, and surveys to depict the year as it happened at the University. The yearbook contains events pertaining to only that year, so each yearbook is unique.

Anyone interested in attaining practical experience in yearbook production is able to be a staff member. During the weekly staff meetings, the staffers receive a story assignment, and they perform the necessary channels to complete it: interviewing, writing copy, scheduling pictures, and laying out the pages. Not only does the Milestone offer students practical experience in yearbook production, it allows students to familiarize themselves with the University as a whole.

"I wanted to get involved with the yearbook for the college involvement. I enjoy that sort of work. The yearbook provides me with the experience of working with other people and the experience of dealing with the University," said Jon Stewart, academics editor.

Through hard work and dedication, the 1984-85 Milestone staff successfully produced the 62nd edition of the University's yearbook, which supplies students with a tangible source reflecting their college experience.

Men's and Women's Residence Hall Associations

Men's and Women's Residence Hall Associations provide a medium of self-government for the men and women of the University residing on campus.

These organizations work to improve living conditions for men and women on campus. They provide various activities to better the relations between the hall residents and administration.

This year they sponsored Residence Hall Week and their annual bridal show, hosted the Kentucky Association of College and University Residence Halls, and raised money for the United Way through their annual Monster Bash and Sexy Legs Contest. They also participated in the Student Association's annual Fall Festival.

Last year the organizations increased the open house hours.

Presently, they are working on a consolidation of the two groups and a name change to "Residence Hall Association". This idea went before the Board of Regents in February.

Little Colonels

The Little Colonels Dance Team performs for enjoyment at home basketball games. This team, under the direction of co-captains Monique Adamson and Carrie Barnes, has made the name of the Little Colonels more widely known with its jazzy halftime routines.

Choreography is done by the captains but the entire squad puts in hours of practice on each number before the actual performances at half-time of the game. Tryouts were held in the fall before judges, ranging from professional drill team advisers to the assistant men's basketball coach. All female full time students are eligible, with the squad limited to the top 20 candidates.

During halftime, the Little Colonels perform one of their dance routines to "She's Got Legs." They usually perform to popular music and spend at least two weeks practicing.

Lasting Friendships

Despite the Greek stereotypes, one can see the unity and bonds each individual group holds. Each organization is bound with the closeness they receive through the interaction of its members. Striving for service, leadership, social, scholarship and friendship, the Greek system provides a unique experience one can only achieve if they belong.

Stereotypes are formulated when people don't understand the structure and function of the Greek system. One of the largest misconceptions is "the fraternities and sororities only party;" however, this idea is far from the truth.

Most of these organizations hold service projects for their philanthropy or for the community each month. Students gain the knowledge of dealing with a national or local philanthropy.

According to Jeff Braun, the Sigma Chi hold the annual Sigma Chi Derby to raise money for their philanthropy, Wallace Village.

"Each year we also hold a roadblock, and this year we earned over $1000 to help our philanthropy," said Braun. "This money goes for a good cause, and it helps you learn how a philanthropy works."

Leadership and scholarship are among the top priorities each group aims for. In order for students to maintain a 2.2 G.P.A., the chapter arranges study hours in the library. If a student has academic difficulties, a tutor will be found to help them raise their grades. Each member also has a chance to attain a leadership role, which provides them with a new approach to learning responsibilities.

Laura Hargrove, Pi Beta Phi, said, "Since we made the highest grade point average on campus, we set aside study hours to maintain this. The number of hours we are supposed to study depends on our G.P.A."

Lasting friendships develop among these brothers and sisters. The motto, "Greek is for a lifetime," demonstrates the closeness received through the association with people you receive in the Greek system. The experiences each one encounters are cherished forever.

As a Kappa Alpha Theta legacy, Jacqueline Thomas said she had a lot of mixed feelings when she rushed. She wanted people to accept her for herself. Jacqueline and her sister, Kim, have never shared the same set of friends. But, since they decided upon the same sorority, they do share the same lasting friendships.

Through the common experiences shared, one can consider these friendships lasting ones with their brother and sisters because "Greek is for a lifetime."

“We put a lot more emphasis on people,” said Lencia Alexander, President of . . .

Panhellenic Council

“We put a lot more emphasis on people,” said Lencia Alexander, President of Panhellenic.

The members of Panhellenic had a lot of decisions to make in the course of the semester, and with a little cooperation and thought they feel they made the right decisions.

“We lowered the ceiling from 85 to 70 girls. We did this to reduce the number of girls you could have in a sorority. By doing this, other smaller sororities would have a better chance to receive girls in the spring because other sororities can only take the number of girls they drop below 70,” said Alexander.

The ladies of Panhellenic also worked harder on rush this year.

“With rush we really put more emphasis on people, not decorations. Some of the smaller sororities really couldn’t afford the lavish decorations the larger sororities could,” said Alexander.

“We really tried to prove that people were the issue.”

The Panhellenic Council also tried things they felt were beneficial to other sororities.

“We held workshops, and socials to get to know each other,” said Alexander.

Sherri Watkowski, a senior marketing major from Lexington, said she felt Panhellenic was a great opportunity.

“It brings people closer together. People see that groups have problems and try to solve them; we want to help,” said Watkowski.

“We tried to keep the chapters informed on the current trends and concerns that affect the Greek community,” said Nancy Holt, Adviser of . . .

Interfraternity Council

“We tried to keep the chapters informed on the current trends and concerns that effect the Greek community,” said Nancy Holt, Adviser to the Interfraternity Council.

The Interfraternity Council is a technical term given to the governing body of all the fraternities on the campus.

Holt said that she feels that the I.F.C. is much more than simply a governing body.

“It is the type of group that you can voice your opinions or concerns in. We also hold things such as workshops and retreats,” said Holt.

In these activities the members are cultivated and helped with ideas and information for their fraternities.

“We hold things like the Presidents’ Round Table. In this the president of both I.F.C. and Panhellenic get together monthly with the presidents all of the fraternities and sororities. In these meetings they discuss problems and how to solve them,” said Holt.

“We also have things like the Presidents’ Retreat in which problems and concerns are discussed at length between fraternities and sorority presidents, and hints on chapter improvement and growth are emphasized.”

Donald T. Bornhorst, an accounting major from Florence, and a fraternity representative to I.F.C. termed as “Alpha Delegate” said he feels the opportunities are enormous.

“It is the chance for the representatives of each fraternity to put together their heads and get some really good ideas. It exemplifies how well a system like this can work,” said Bornhorst.

“We feel good about the things we have accomplished, and we feel like we have really done a lot,” said Marlene Black, President of Alpha Kappa Alpha.

After an outlook was completed Black said that fundraisers and other activities were a factor.

“We feel that we have accomplished a lot. We have donated to church groups, and performed various community services. These included holding dances and parties with the proceeds benefiting the National Negro College Fund and the N.A.A.C.P. and, also, the National Urban League,” said Black.

Soror Wanda Feagins, a senior majoring in accounting said that she felt the sorority was unique.

Feagins said, “They are ambitious. They have continued to uphold the traditions they were based on. Also I’m very proud of my sorority. The sisters are very close and I like that.”

Delta Sigma Theta

“We have become highly service oriented; in fact, we set a goal of ten service projects and we have achieved all of them,” said Lori Jenkins, President of Delta Sigma Theta.

The Deltas have been very busy this semester. They have concentrated more on the community than themselves.

“Just because we are Greek doesn’t mean that we are only involved in the social aspect of the Greek system,” said Jenkins.

“We decided to work extra hard on community service and we really had a busy semester.”

The Deltas participated in the Hanging of the Greens, Christmas caroling, greek friends, designing and hanging a banner at all games and marching in the Christmas parade.

Gwendolyn Rice, a Lexington native and senior nursing major felt that the Deltas were themselves.

“They were down to earth. I could really relate to them. They were just like me, not fake or showy.” said Rice. “I have been for three years and, well, I’m still Gwendolyn and that’s how it should be.”

“There really isn’t any such thing as number one, but we feel we are as high as we can be,” said Annette Slater, President of

Alpha Delta Pi

“There isn’t really any such thing as number one, but we feel that we are as high as we can be with Nationals, unity, and officers,” said Cynthia Stanford, President of Alpha Delta Pi.

The Sisters of ADPi are doing very well this semester and think that it is something that you must work for rather than expect to happen.

“We really had to work hard. Every sorority has clicks, and we really worked on promoting sisterhood. We held a camp out at Lake Cumberland and had a great time. We took time to realize that we are sisters first and not smaller groups,” said Stanford.

Stanford said she feels that all the clicks are gone and that the ADPi’s can get on with more important things such as their image.

“We are doing the best we have ever done this semester. We have second in grades when we were seventh, and we have got a great set of officers that really care about the sorority,” she said.

Stanford considers the ADPis “unique” in that they cannot be classified.

“Most sororities are known for one thing or another. We are not like that. When you think of ADPi you can’t think of just one thing. That is what is great,” she said.

Sherry Kaffenbarger, a junior public relations major from Springfield, Ohio, said she feels that ADPis helped her realize her potential.

She said “They stressed individuality, and I felt as though I could share my talents and get active with a group of girls from very different backgrounds.”

Alpha Gamma Delta

“We have improved 100 percent.” said Annette Slater, President of Alpha Gamma Delta.

The sisters of Alpha Gamma Delta have had a very busy semester.

“We have had a great rush in which we received 33 girls. We have brought up our overall scholarship to number two on campus, and all of the thanks should go to the hard work of the girls and the tremendous support from our Nationals,” said Slater.

The Sisters of Alpha Gamma Delta concentrated on the chapter as a whole this semester and had a great rush.

“We rushed like other sororities and set up booths and rooms. Our Nationals helped us financially and they even came down to the University and helped our rush go smoother,” said Slater. The Alpha Gams really worked internally to get ready for the visit from Nationals.

“We attended workshops and worked closely together.

The real secret to a good rush is working together,” said Slater.

Jamie Baker, a freshman from Verona, Kentucky, majoring in journalism felt that Alpha Gam is a growing experience.

“I was really impressed in the way they were all like family. The girls really stick together and since Nationals came down and helped us out things are really going great,” she said.

Chi Omega

“It’s hard to be perfect when you get 85 girls together, but we come very close,” said Anita Vincent President of Chi Omega.

Vincent has been a Chi-O for her entire college career and feels that the Chi-Os are structurally sound. “We try to help our group internally,” said Vincent. “We are very close, and are sound both scholastically and socially, but that doesn’t mean there isn’t room for improvement.”

Vincent feels that there is always room for improvement and the Chi-Os are no exception. “We strive for a positive attitude. You have to work at it. You constantly have to work on campus image, grades, and sisterhood,” said Vincent “It’s tough to do all of that and be sincere but with work it all works out.”

Concerning rush, Vincent adds “We had to spend much more time on selling each and every person in the sorority, and concentrating less on the shows and the decorations. Also we had to be fairly selective because we could only take a limited number of girls.”

Elizabeth Phillips, a senior nursing major from Middletown, Ohio, felt the girls were themselves at rush. “I felt at home. They were more than friendly, they were sincere,” said Phillips. “I made the best choice for myself that I could have made — Chi Omega.”

Delta Zeta

“We want people to know we are out here, and we are someone to be contended with,” said Melissa Sizemore, President of Delta Zeta Sorority.

“We have all types here,” said Sizemore. “We have everyone from cheerleaders to athletes.”

Sizemore is speaking of the uniqueness of Delta Zeta. She feels that through their extreme diversity the D.Z.s find themselves continually striving toward unity.

“Only through hard work and sisterhood can you have a chapter as close as ours,” said Sizemore.

The D.Z.s strive to unite each other in sincere and lasting friendships and to stimulate one another in the pursuit of knowledge and the moral and social culture of its members.

The D.Z.s have a Greek Friend, sponsor the Frat Man

Classic, and collect food for the needy. They also visit area nursing homes annually. All this is an effort to strengthen and enrich their sisterhood and build strong moral character.

Tracy Dimond, a sophomore nursing major likes the diversity. “You have so many personalities. It takes the diversity to really make the sorority gain personality.”

Kappa Alpha Theta

“The purpose of Kappa Alpha Theta is threefold: to strive for the highest scholarship, social atmosphere, and community service,” said Beth Mullett, President of Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority.

Also, the Thetas work very hard to support their national philanthropy, which is the Institute of Logopedics.

The Thetas have been active in the community by working at the Old Armory sponsoring a Halloween party for the children of Richmond. The Thetas helped with campus community activities such as raking leaves, collecting soup labels and providing supplies to the Institute of Logopedics.

The sisters of Kappa Alpha Theta have been on campus for 12 years and were founded in March of 1972. Their adviser is Ms. Shirley Deane.

The Thetas have tried to maintain a level of sisterhood that they are known for. “We believe friendship doesn’t stop at rush,” said Mullett. “It only begins there.”

“We strive to strengthen the sorority from the outside in,” said Robin Rush, President of . . .

Kappa Delta

“We strive to strengthen the sorority from the outside in,” said Robin Rush, President of Kappa Delta Sorority.

“Sisterhood and unity begin in the heart and mind of each girl. After that is exemplified in the member, the rest comes naturally,” Rush said.

The sisters of Kappa Delta have also tried to publicize their sorority nationally with increased activities. For example, the K.D.s raised $1,000 for their national philanthropy by roadblocks and projects. Also, the pledge class adopts a senior citizen from a local nursing home and visits this person.

The Crippled Children’s Fund in Richmond, Virginia, is their national philanthropy. The sisters of Kappa Delta feel the cause is a very worthy one.

“You really feel lucky for little things when you think of those less fortunate,” said Rush. “That is why we really work hard to support our philanthropy.”

Amy Hughes, a nursing major from Ormond Beach, Florida, feels the K.D.s are sisters to the end. “It’s been not only the good times, but the times when you realize things aren’t working out and you feel as though you need to say sorry,” said Hughes. “A real sister cares enough about her sisters to do that, and we do.”

“We had a continuous open rush and we got nine fine girls,” said Leslie Moyer, President of Phi Mu.

The Phi Mus worked toward increasing membership and building scholarship.

“We rushed from August till October. I really think this last pledge class was one of, if not, the best pledge class we have had in a while,” said Moyer.

“We had study hours and we have girls that are more than willing to help each other if they have problems in any major,” said Moyer.

The Phi Mus are also doing a great deal with fundraisers.

“We raised $1,300 for muscular dystrophy and $350 for Project Read. We strive to complete one service project a month,” said Moyer.

The sisters of Phi Mu have alumnae that really stand behind them.

“A newsletter is sent out to our alumnae and we are building on that. We also do one activity for our alumnae a month. Our alumnae program is going very well,” said Moyer.

Docia Knezevich, a fashion merchandising major from Louisville, said she felt that the Phi Mus were just what she wanted.

“They were themselves. They were natural. I liked the girls because they care,” said Knezevich.

“We may be small, but the bonds of sisterhood are more intense and are felt by all of us,” said Jackie Hale, President of Pi Beta Phi.

“We have continually tried to keep our scholastics up and at the same time structure our officers to work better with the chapter itself,” Hale said.

Hale feels that the sisters of Pi Beta Phi are very close because they are smaller than most sororities, which permits them more time to know each on a more personal and sincere level. Hale also believes that the Pi Phis take more time to work together rather than have one person do it themselves.

Maresa Taylor, a senior public relations major from Henry County, initiated because of integrity. “I knew Jackie Hale, and I really respected her,”

Taylor confided. “I was very happy I received and accepted a bid. I only feel sorry for the independents, if only they knew what they were missing,” Taylor added. The word sisterhood is what the Pi Phis go by. Hale said, “To be close and to be small sort of go in hand, for us it has all the advantages. It comes naturally for us.”

Beta Theta Pi

“It’s something you can’t explain. It’s the inner spirit that makes you want to work for your fraternity—Beta Spirit,” said Temple Juett, president of Beta Theta Pi.

“I’ve had two tough acts to follow, but the personal aspect of our fraternity is as strong as ever,” said Juett. “We always try to talk to people on a one to one basis. We simply let them know our fraternity is interested in them as people, not as pledges.”

The brothers of Beta Theta Pi have been active not only with their Greek friend, which is a child the brothers have been active with in the community, but also with their national philanthropy.

The Beta’s philanthropy is comprised of needy families nationwide. The brothers worked hard this semester with roadblocks and with the Beta football and basketball tournament in order to raise money to supply food to these needy families.

Sophomore Todd Marksberry majoring in pre-law feels “Beta Spirit” is innate. “It’s something everyone wants to put out. It’s the pride we put into any thing we undertake, not because we have to but because we want to,” said Marksberry. “The time that I spent pledging was the best time of my life. I really wouldn’t change a thing.”

Kappa Alpha Order

“We are not a fraternity, we are an order,” said Andy Mathews, the President of Kappa Alpha Order. “As it has been passed down to us since 1865, an order unlike a fraternity strives to accept everyone on an individual basis,” added Mathews.

The brothers of Kappa Alpha Order believe you should accept someone as they are and not try to emulate or modify people in any way. “During rush we remember this fact, and help to improve not change others,” said Mathews.

Mathews, a senior from Russell County and a major in pre-vet., believes that chivalry best describes the brothers of Kappa Alpha. “Our founding father Robert E. Lee is the person we always strive to emulate,” said Mathews. “Lee didn’t drink, curse, or swear, and he always held women in high esteem,” confided Mathews.

The Delta Mu Chapter of Kappa Alpha stressed brotherhood at all times and worked to build a strong sense of community involvement through such diverse activities as Greek friends, the Blood Mobile, raising money for muscular dystrophy and being the marshals for the Richmond Community Christmas Parade.

Duane Horn, a junior management major from Lexington, felt that Kappa Alpha was the only choice when he rushed. “All the K.A.s I met were sincere, and friendly. They were the kind of people that would have treated me as a friend even though I may not have rushed,” said Horn.

The brother of Kappa Alpha Psi are currently working on their guide right program.

“This program is designed to help both the community and charities. For instance, after spring break we plan on visiting kids at the Shriner’s Hospital,” said Sturdivant.

The Kappas are also busy with other fundraisers and activities that include both the University and the community.

“We sponsor things such as dances and social activities. The money we receive is donated to charities such as the National Negro College Fund and the N.A.A.C.P.,” said Sturdivant.

The Kappas also work closely with the University.

“We held a Thanksgiving canned food drive. The admission to our dance was, of course, canned food and we donated that to the Telford Community Center,” said Sturdivant.

Troy Ellis, a sophomore from Louisville, majoring in computer informational systems, said he felt that he would have been nothing but a Kappa.

Ellis said, “There are certain distinctions and purposes that you can see with in our fraternity. Our purpose is to achieve in all of our human endeavors to bring out the best person that anyone can be; this brings out the best in me.”

“We are one big family, and we have the support of many alumnae,” said Kathy Walker, President of Zeta Phi Beta.

The Zetas are in the rebuilding stages, but this is no problem for them.

“We are a very close knit organization, and even though we don’t have many people we all work together. We know everyone on a close, one-to-one basis,” said Walker.

The Zetas are busy with not only their national philanthropy, but also with community activities.

“Our national philanthropy is the Storcks Nest, or a national service for unwed mothers that provides them with money and clothing,” said Walker.

“We have also held several dances and the proceeds have gone to the United Way or the Black Student Union.”

The energy of the Zetas is shown not only in the chapter and alumnae, but also in Dianne Hickman, a senior medical assistant from Bullitt County.

“When you see how much sisterhood the chapter has you know you want to be part of that. They really care about each other, and it does show,” said Hickman.

“We wanted to work on community service and we really had a busy semester,” said Frederick Burdell, President of Phi Beta Sigma.

The Sigmas have done a great deal this semester. They really worked hard on their community service among other things.

“We worked on things such as canned food drive for the needy of Richmond and we raised over $600 for the Telford Community Center. We also held our First Annual Bowl-A-Thon to raise money for The United Way,” said Burdell.

The Sigmas also wanted to work on things such as scholarship.

“We wanted to work hard to bring up our G.P.A. We held some study sessions in the library and encouraged our members to work harder on their grades,” he said.

The Sigmas seem to be doing well and this semester is no exception.

“We have a very tight brotherhood. We seem to be doing real good this semester. I have been a Sigma for two years and I really have seen a change, a great deal of progress,” said Burdell.

Bernard Grimes, a junior from Hopkinsville, Kentucky, and a major in Therapeutic Recreation sees the Sigmas as more than a fraternity.

Grimes said, “There is a great deal of unity. There is a certain way they show their brotherhood. They are themselves and I like that. I like to feel like I can be myself and I can.”

“Our greatest goal is to make people realize that we aren’t the stereotypes many people have given us,” said Thad Brown, President of Omega Psi Phi.

Brown said he feels that an image change and the breaking of stereotypes was the goal for the brothers.

“We aren’t like most people think we are. We are a lot of guys with very individual personalities. We are a little bit of everything,” said Brown.

The Qs have done simple things to show other people on campus that they are unique.

“We are currently having a dress up day in which we show the community that we are gentlemen. We also toned down our step show so that it appears more conservative and less wild,” said Brown.

The Qs have also done a lot for the community and for charity.

“We had a Halloween party for the community and especially for the children of Richmond. We also had a community dance for the people of Richmond in which we served free food and drinks. We also raised money for the national Negro College Fund, and Sickle Cell Anemia. In all, we donated about $700 to $800 to causes and charities,” said Brown.

The Qs have five pledges but to them that is exceptional.

Brown said, “We really have a tight-knit group and we go for quality individuals, not numbers. We stress quality and get it.”

“The Phi Delts have sworn to uphold the virtues our fraternity was based upon,” said Proctor. “These are friendship, sound learning, and moral rectitude.”

Among other distinctions the brothers of Phi Delta Theta have been nominated for the Gold Star Award. This award is presented to only fewer than ten percent of all the chapters nationwide.

“To even be nominated for the Gold Star your chapter has to do well academically — we consistently rank among the top three fraternities on campus for grades, display brotherhood, and have an exceptional chapter,” Proctor said.

The Phi Delts have been busy this semester doing numerous things. The Phi Delts helped extensively with the first annual Maroon Bash by setting up and serving, and by providing valet parking. Also, the brothers of Kentucky Theta have donated to A.L.S., their national philanthropy.

Glen Daves, a junior public relations major from Louisville, rushed for one reason. “They had an excellent reputation on campus, and I was impressed in their genuine interest in me,” said Daves. “Only certain people can be a Phi Delt, I’m proud to say that now I am one.”

The brothers of Phi Kappa Tau have been busy as well as close. They have sponsored Goodman says he believes that as a group they are very unified.

“We are very close-knit. We don’t just look for guys that are ‘Our type’. We believe that because we are different we are closer as a group,” said Goodman.

Goodman also said he thinks the Pikes are something to be proud of.

“I guess you could call us the fraternity of champions. We usually set out to do something and accomplish it. We do get things done, it may be slow but we get the job done,” said Goodman.

The Pikes are pretty busy working on Pike’s Peak Week and other activities.

“We are working on even more involvement in Pike’s Peak Week. We’ve got the Dream Girl Pageant. We also work hard on this because it is our big event for the semester.

That’s why involvement is really important,” said Goodman.

“As President I really wanted to work on grades. Also, I wanted to put more work and emphasis on the Pike Pageant,” said Goodman.

Goodman summed up the semester by saying that “Everything went well and that my fraternity experience was really positive, and of course I wouldn’t have changed any aspect of it.”

“We wanted to update our alumni program, take a lot of good pledges, and raise a lot of money for our national philanthropy — we did it all,” said Kent Howell, President of Sigma Chi Fraternity.

The brothers of Sigma Chi have excelled in everything they have endeavored to do this semester, “We now send

The brothers of Sigma Chi raised $1,500 for the cause, “We’re unified, We really want to work on that, and I think we have really achieved it,” said Perry Tussey, President of Sigma Nu Fraternity.

Tussey felt besides unity, the Nus had to work on pledges. “We really tried to be visible on campus. Other than that we really tried to work on chapter size. We went from 22 to 27 and that is really good for us.”

The Nus are also active on and off campus. They visited the Shriner’s Hospital and local nursing homes. Also, they sponsored a pool tourney and a-nut-and-bolt party.

Tussey also added that like any other group they had to work on campus image and visibility. “We really tried to be seen on campus. We knew who were brothers, but other people didn’t.” Tussey added.

Chip Bach, a senior from Chicago, and a major in police administration felt Sigma Nu was an excellent choice for him. “When I pledged we had a house and I really looked for a group I could identify with. They were friendly and seemed sincere and ready to help out at any time,” Bach confided.

When asked if Bach thought he had made the right decision he said “yes” and said he would do it again.

“Think of us as big fish in a small pond. You don’t need numbers to do well,” said Joe Ingle, President of . . .

Sigma Pi

“Think of us as big fish in a small pond. You don’t need numbers to do well,” said Joe Ingle, President of Sigma Pi.

The Brothers of Sigma Pi prove that numbers are not important to be big on campus.

“This semester we have done pretty well. We have the number one ranking as far as grades for actives go and we were second in the number of points for the All-Sports Trophy.”

The Sigma Pis were short five points from being first and they have really had fun participating in the events and working together as a group.

The Brothers of Sigma Pi also show a great deal of change in the past few semesters.

“We have worked on a lot of short-term goals as opposed to a few long-range ones. You know, people change and within a fraternity you have so much change, administration to administration, that you have to keep things running like a business or your image changes,” said Ingle.

Because the Sigma Pis are not large they feel they have an advantage over other groups.

“You have more of a chance to assume leadership roles, sometimes more than one role. You also assume more responsibility,” said Ingle.

Ingle said he feels that the goals such as grades and sports are something they set and worked toward and they have also worked on community service.

“We have been active in the local Meals on Wheels program and have helped in the Special Olympics and the United Way,” he said.

The Sigma Pis have changed a great deal and Ingle feels that it is definite progress.

“Right now being in the Fraternity is more of a rounded experience. We stress grades, athletics and brotherhood. What more could you ask from a fraternity?”

Tau Kappa Epsilon

“We’ve been making progress in leaps and bounds,” said Todd Taylor, President of Tau Kappa Epsilon.

“We really tried some inventive ideas. We are really on an upward swing,” said Taylor.

The Brothers of TKE have worked very hard this semester on both G.P.A. and their chapters size.

“We have tried to improve chapter size in accordance to the quality of the people we bring in,” said Taylor. “Out of 21 men we had 15 go active.”

Taylor said that their house was also a goal this semester.

“We used $5,000 to improve our house. We did some remodeling and the brothers worked very hard to keep the house looking good,” said Taylor.

Taylor also said that their fund raisers netted a lot in donations.

“We held a Special Olympics roadblock and in one day raised $1,700. We also helped with the Special Olympics when some of the events were held at Maroon Lanes. We kept score and had a lot of fun,” said Taylor.

Sophomore Christopher Niblock majoring in journalism felt that as a transfer student from Drexel University in Philadelphia, the chapter at the University was quite a change.

“Our chapter was pretty big at D.U. We had about 130 members there as compared to about 30 here. In a big city you can’t be as open with people as you can here. People here seem like they would give you the shirt off their back. People in the city really didn’t have time for things that you make time for here, like events and things of that nature,” said Niblock.

“We’ve really made a big turn-around. We are more visible on campus, are a tighter knit group, and had a successful rush,” said Scott Ford, President of . . .

Theta Chi

“We’re really made a big turn-around. We are more visible on campus, are a tighter knit group and had a successful rush,” said Scott Ford, president of Theta Chi Fraternity.

The Theta Chis are closer this year than in previous semesters. “We had a little trouble with clicks, most greek organizations do. We set out to become more aware of each other and to help each other in anyway,” said Ford.

Ford added that he believes he could ask anything of his brothers and they would be more than willing to help out.

The Theta Chis local philanthropy is the Cardinal Hill Hospital. They raised money for them and also spend an entire weekend cleaning out the Begley Drug’s Warehouse.

“We are a close group. I can really see a change in Theta Chi since I pledged four years ago,” Ford confided.

Steve Pyle, a new initiate, feels that Theta Chi was his only clear choice. “I knew at least eight guys before I came through rush. I really thought I would fit in well with them,” Pyle added.

“We’ve spend a lot of time concentrating on the group as a whole,” said Ford “We went on camping trips and held rush workshops.”

“We really wanted to get our name known more on campus. I think we have achieved that,” said Ford.

“We give new associates the chance to assume leadership roles in the fraternity early,” said Jeff Browning, President of . . .

Lambda Chi Alpha

“We give new associates the chance to assume leadership roles in the fraternity early,” said Jeff Browning, President of Lambda Chi Alpha.

“We really strived for participation and scholastics this semester, and because of chapter involvement we increased chapter size, G.P.A., and participation,” added Browning.

“Friendship would have to be the one word that describes us best,” said Browning. “Because when you first join you have the opportunity to step directly into a leadership role, Browning confided.

The brothers of Lambda Chi Alpha have been busy with many community activities. A few of these are donating money to the Ronald McDonald House in Lexington, Air Band Contest and donate food to charities by sponsoring a sorority president kidnap.

Browning feels that the fraternity is unique in that the new “associates” are encouraged to assume leadership roles and are given the freedom to express themselves.

Ronald Hammond, a junior majoring in health care administration felt that the great thing is that the opportunity to lead is there, you only have to use it.

Self Timer

Countless windows appeared before each of us.
While striving toward our anticipated dreams
we learned many things about people, our world, and most importantly, ourselves.

For some, the walls crumbled before them others it collapsed on them and the dreams were shattered. Reality? – Yes.

Everyone of us experienced the realization of our “Dreams Turning into Reality”

A thought to ponder –

Dreams never die nor do they ever end.

Through those windows

we will still find dreams to dream!

Editor's Notes

I have fulfilled my duties and in the process have completed a dream which started with great expectations and ended with high gratification.

I take this opportunity to thank those devoted persons who contributed to the 1985 Milestone.

To adviser, Larry Bailey, you judged better than I my abilities and confidence in me to make this dream a reality. Thank you for your encouragement and reassurance.

To Diana Smith, your dedication helped to conquer the walls we came upon throughout the year. Because of your vast knowledge of journalism the copy in this edition is excellent.

To Robert Hughes, your devotion and enthusiasm was an enlightening relief to me. Thanks for the laughter you brought me and the innovative ideas you contributed to the yearbook.

To Jon Stewart, your dedication has honored you by being chosen as Outstanding Editor.

To the section editors, thanks for your diligence and hard work.

To the photographers, Lambert, Thompson, Maples and Penegor, because of you the Milestone is full of priceless memories. A special thanks for putting forth the extra effort this year. — How was that?

To Bill Stoess, Becky Alexander and Greg Whalen at Delmar Publishing, an enormous thank you for your patience, and the unforgettable memories.

I feel it imperative to thank my parents Aloha & Wilbur Moore, I love you and thank you for your never ending support! To Doug Cook and all of those who provided encouragement — it was greatly appreciated.

Special thanks to: the AA Printing gang, for your understanding to my obligation; Will Mansfield, for your beautiful photographs; Arlington County Club, for the delicious food; Libby Williamson, for your sketching of President Powell; Sherry, Kim, Shari Ramey and Gilliam Langley, for your writings you contributed.

My time has come, and reluctantly I give up this era of my life. However, I have found a new dream; as this dream has come to a close. I feel confident you will hold this book for a lifetime so may none of us forget the dreams we shared together. It was created for that purpose — so reminisce and forever live your dreams.

Enjoy!
